LETTER

TO THE

PUBLISHER,

Occasioned by the first correct

Edition of the DUNCIAD.

IT is with pleasure I hear, that you have procured a correct copy of the DUNCIAD, which the many surreptitious ones have rendered so necessary; and it is yet with more, that I am informed it will be attended with a COMMENTARY: A Work so requisite, that I cannot think the Author himself would have omitted it, had he approved of the first appearance of this poem.

Such Notes as have occurred to me I herewith send you: You will oblige me by inserting them amongst those which are, or will be, transmitted to you by others; since not only the Author's friends, but even strangers, appear engaged by humanity, to take some care of an Orphan of so much genius and spirit, which its parent seems to have abandoned from the beginning, and suffered to step into the world naked, unguarded, and unattended.

It was upon reading some of the abusive papers lately published, that my great regard to a Person, whose Friendship I esteem as one of the chief honours of my life, and a much greater respect to Truth, than to him or any man living, engaged me in inquiries, of which the inclosed Notes are the fruit.

I perceived, that most of these Authors had been (doubtless very wisely) the first aggressors. They had tried, 'till they were weary, what was to be got by railing at each other: Nobody was either concerned or surprized, if this or that scribler was proved a dunce. But every one was curious to read what could be said to prove Mr POPE one, and was ready to pay something for such a discovery: A stratagem, which, would they fairly own, it might not only reconcile them to me, but screen them from the resentment of their lawful Superiors, whom they daily abuse, only (as I charitably hope) to get that by them, which they cannot get from them.

I found this was not all: ill success in that had transported them to Personal abuse, either of himself, or (what I think he could less forgive) of his Friends. They had called Men of virtue and honour bad Men, long before he had either leisure or inclination to call them bad writers: And some had been such old offenders, that he had quite forgotten their persons as well as their flanders, till they were pleased to revive them.

Now what had Mr POPE done before, to incense them? He had published those works which are in the hands of every body, in which not the least mention is made of any of them. And what has he done since? He has laughed, and written the DUNCIAD. What has that said of them? A very serious truth, which the public had said before, that they were dull: And what it had no sooner said, but they themselves were at great pains to procure, or even purchase room in the prints to testify under their hands to the truth of it.

I should still have been silent, if either I had seen any inclination in my friend to be serious with such accusers, or if they had only meddled with his Writings; since whoever publishes, puts himself on his trial by his Country. But when his moral character was attacked, and in a manner from which neither truth nor virtue can secure the most innocent; in a manner which though it annihilates the credit of the accusation with the just and impartial, yet aggravates very much the guilt of the accusers; I mean by Authors without names; then I thought, since the danger was common to all, the concern ought to be so; and that it was an act of justice to detect the Authors, not only on this account, but as many of them are the same, who, for several years past, have made free with the greatest names in Church and State, exposed to the world the private misfortunes of Families, abused all, even to women, and whose prostituted papers (for one or other Party, in the unhappy divisions of their Country) have insulted the Fallen, the Friendless, the Exil'd, and the Dead.

Besides this, which I take to be a public concern, I have already confessed I had a private one. I am one of that number who have long loved and esteemed Mr POPE; and had often declared it was not his capacity or writings (which we ever thought the least valuable part of his character) but the honest, open, and beneficent man, that we most esteemed, and loved in him. Now, if what these people say were believed, I must appear to all my friends either a fool, or a knave; either imposed on myself, or imposing on them; so that I am as much interested in the confutation of these calumnies, as he is himself.

I am no Author, and consequently not to be suspected either of jealousy or resentment against any of the Men, of whom scarce one is known to me by sight; and as for their Writings, I have sought them (on this one occasion) in vain, in the closets and libraries of all my acquaintance. I had still been in the dark, if a Gentlemen had not procured me (I suppose from some of themselves, for they are generally much more dangerous friends than enemies) the passages I send you. I solemnly protest I have added nothing to the malice or absurdity of them; which it behoves me to declare, since the vouchers themselves will be so soon and so irrecoverably lost. You may in some measure prevent it, by preserving at least their Titles^a, and discovering (as far as you can depend on the truth of your information) the Names of the concealed authors.

The first objection I have heard made to the Poem is, that the persons are too obscure for satire. The persons themselves, rather than allow the objection, would forgive the satire; and if one could be tempted to afford it a serious answer, were not all assassins, popular insurrections, the insolence of the rabble without doors, and of domestics within, most wrongfully chastised, if the Meanness of offenders indemnified them from punishment? On the contrary, Obscurity renders them more dangerous, as less thought of: Law can pronounce judgment only on open facts: Morality alone can pass censure on intentions of Mischief; so that for secret calumny, or the arrow flying in the dark, there is no public punishment left, but what a good Writer inflicts.

The next objection is, that these sort of authors are poor. That might be pleaded as an excuse at the Old Bailey for lesser crimes than Defamation, (for 'tis the case of almost all who are tried there); but sure it can be none here: For who will pretend that the robbing another of his reputation supplies the want of it in himself? I question not but such authors are poor, and heartily wish the objection were removed by any honest livelihood. But Poverty is here the accident, not the subject: He who describes Malice and Villany to be pale and meagre, expresses not the least anger against Paleness and Leanness, but against Malice and Villany. The Apothecary in Romeo and Juliet is poor; but is he therefore justified in vending poison? Not but Poverty itself becomes a just subject of satire, when it is the consequence of vice, prodigality, or neglect of one's lawful calling; for then it increases the public burden, fills the streets and highways with Robbers, and the Garrets with Clippers, Coiners, and Weekly Journalists.

But admitting that two or three of these offend less in their morals, than in their writings; must Poverty make nonsense sacred? if so, the fame of bad authors would be much better consulted than that of all the good ones in the world; and not one of an hundred had ever been called by his right name.

They mistake the whole matter: It is not charity to encourage them in the way they follow, but to get them out of it; for men are not bunglers because they are poor, but they are poor because they are bunglers.

Is it not pleasant enough, to hear our authors crying out on the one hand, as if their persons and characters were too sacred for satire; and the public objecting on the other, that they are too mean even for ridicule? But whether Bread or Fame be their end, it must be allowed, our author, by and in this Poem, has mercifully given them a little of both.

There are two or three, who by their rank and fortune have no benefit from the former objections, supposing them good, and these I was sorry to see in such company. But if, without any provocation, two or three Gentlemen will fall upon one, in an affair wherein his interest and reputation are equally embarked; they cannot certainly, after they have been content to print themselves his enemies, complain of being put into the number of them.

Others, I am told, pretend to have been once his Friends. Surely they are their enemies who say so, since nothing can be more odious than to treat a friend as they have done. But of this I cannot persuade myself, when I consider the constant and eternal aversion of all bad writers to a good one.

Such as claim a merit from being his Admirers, I would gladly ask, if it lays him under a personal obligation? At that rate, he would be the most obliged humble servant in the world. I dare swear for these in particular, he never desired them to be his admirers, nor promised in return to be theirs: That had truly been a sign he was of their acquaintance; but would not the malicious world have suspected such an Approbation of some motive worse than ignorance, in the author of the Essay on Criticism? Be it as it will, the reasons of their Admiration and of his Contempt are equally subsisting; for his works and theirs are the very same that they were.

One, therefore, of their assertions I believe may be true, "That he has a contempt for their writings." And there is another, which would probably be sooner allowed by himself than by any good judge, beside, "That his own have found too much success with the public." But as it cannot consist with his modesty to claim this as a Justice, it lies not on him, but entirely on the public, to defend its own judgment.

There remains what in my opinion might seem a better plea for these people, than any they have made use of. If Obscurity or Poverty were to exempt a man from satire, much more should Folly or Dulness, which are still more involuntary; nay, as much so as personal Deformity. But even this will not help them: Deformity becomes an object of Ridicule when a man sets up for being handsome; and so must Dulness when he sets up for a Wit. They are not ridiculed, because Ridicule in itself is, or ought to be, a pleasure; but because it is just to undeceive and vindicate the honest and unpretending part of mankind from imposition, because particular interest ought to yield to general, and a great number who are not naturally Fools, ought never to be made so, in complaisance to a few who are. Accordingly we find, that, in all ages, all vain pretenders, were they ever so poor or ever so dull, have been constantly the topics of the most candid satirists, from the Codrus of JUVENAL to the Damon of BOILEAU.

Having mentioned BOILEAU, the greatest Poet and most judicious Critic of his age and country, admirable for his Talents, and yet perhaps more admirable for his judgment in the proper application of them; I cannot help remarking the resemblance betwixt him and our author, in Qualities, Fame, and Fortune; in the distinctions shewn them by their Superiors, in the general esteem of their Equals, and in their extended reputation amongst Foreigners; in the latter of which ours has met with the better fate, as he has had for his Translators persons of the most eminent rank and abilities in their respective nations^b. But the resemblance holds in nothing more, than in being equally abused by the ignorant pretenders to Poetry of their times; of which not the least

^b Essay on Criticism in French verse, by General Hamilton; the same, in verse also, by Monsieur Roboton, Counsellor and Privy Secretary to King George I. after by the Abbé Reynel, in verse, with notes. Others of his memory will remain but in their own Writings, and in the Notes made upon them. What Boileau has done in almost all his Poems, our author has only in this; I dare answer for him he will do it in no more; and on this principle, of attacking few but who had slandered him, he could not have done it at all, had he been confined from censuring obscure and worthless persons; for scarce any other were his enemies. However, as the parity is so remarkable, I hope it will continue to the last; and if ever he should give us an edition of this Poem himself, I may see some of them treated as gently, on their repentance or better merit, as Perrault and Quinault were at last by BOILEAU.

In one point I must be allowed to think the character of our English poet the more amiable. He has not been a follower of Fortune or Success; he has lived with the Great, without flattery; been a friend to Men in power, without pensions, from whom, as he asked, so he received, no favour, but what was done Him in his Friends. As his Satires were the more just for being delayed, so were his Panegyrics, bestowed only on such persons as he had familiarly known, only for such virtues as he had long observed in them, and only at such times as others cease to praise, if not begin to calumniate them, I mean when out of power or out of works by Salvini of Florence, &c. His Essays and Dissertations on Homer, several times translated into French. Essay on Man by the Abbé Reynel. in verse; by Monsieur Silhouet, in prose, 1737, and since by others in French, Italian, and Latin.

fashion^c. A satire therefore on writers, so notorious for the contrary practice, became no man so well as himself; as none, it is plain, was so little in their friendships, or so much in that of those whom they had most abused, namely the Greatest and Best of all Parties. Let me add a further reason, that, though engaged in their Friendships, he never espoused their Animosities; and can almost singly challenge this honour, not to have written a line of any man, which, through Guilt, through Shame, or through Fear, through variety of Fortune, or change of Interests, he was ever unwilling to own.

I shall conclude with remarking what a pleasure it must be to every reader of Humanity, to see all along, that our Author in his very laughter is not indulging his own ill-nature, but only punishing that of others. As to his Poem, those alone are capable of doing it justice, who, to use the words of a great writer, know how hard it is (with regard both to his subject and his manner) VETUSTIS DARE NOVITATEM

^c As Mr Wycherley, at the time the Town declaimed against his book of Poems; Mr Walsh, after his death; Sir William Trumbull, when he had resigned the Office of Secretary of State; Lord Bolingbroke, at his leaving England after the Queen's death; Lord Oxford in his last decline of life; Mr Secretary Craggs at the end of the South-Sea year, and after his death: Others only in Epitaphs.

Dec. 22^d, 1728.

WILLIAM CLELAND^d.

^d This Gentleman was of Scotland, and bred at the University of Utrecht, with the Earl of Mar. He served in Spain under Earl Rivers. After the Peace, he was made one of the Commissioners of the Customs in Scotland, and then of Taxes in England; in which having shewn himself for 20 years diligent, punctual, and incorruptible, (though without any other assistance of Fortune) he was suddenly displaced by the Minister, in the sixty-eighth year of his age; and died two months after, in 1741. He was a person of Universal Learning, and an enlarged Conversation; no man had a warmer heart for his Friend, or a sincerer attachment to the Constitution of his Country.

DENNIS, Remarks on Pr. ARTHUR.

I Cannot but think it the most reasonable thing in the world, to distinguish good writers, by discouraging the bad. Nor is it an ill-natured thing, in relation even to the very persons upon whom the reflections are made. It is true, it may deprive them, a little the sooner, of a short profit and a transitory reputation; but then it may have a good effect, and oblige them (before it be too late) to decline that for which they are so very unfit, and to have recourse to something in which they may be more successful.

CHARACTER of Mr P. 1716.

THE Persons whom Boileau has attacked in his writings, have been for the most part Authors, and most of those Authors, Poets: And the censures he hath passed upon them have been confirmed by all Europe.

GILDON, Pref. to his NEW REHEARSAL.

IT is the common cry of the Poetasters of the town, and their fautors, that it is an ill-natured thing to expose the Pretenders to wit and poetry. The Judges and Magistrates may with full as good reason be reproached with Ill-nature for putting the Laws in execution against a Thief or Impostor.—The same will hold in the republic of Letters, if the Critics and Judges will let every ignorant pretender to scribbling pass on the World.

THEOBALD, Letter to Mift, June 22. 1728.

ATTACKS may be levelled, either against Failures in Genius, or against the Pretensions of writing without conc.

CONCANEN, Ded. to the Author of the DUNCIAD.

A Satire upon Dulness is a thing that has been used and allowed in All Ages.

Out of thine own mouth will I judge thee, wicked Scribbler!

CONCERNING

Our POET and his WORKS.

M. SCRIBLERUS Lectori S.

BEFORE we present thee with our exertions on this most delectable Poem (drawn from the many volumes of our Adversaria on modern Authors) we shall here, according to the laudable usage of editors, collect the various judgments of the Learned concerning our Poet: Various indeed, not only of different authors, but of the same author at different seasons. Nor shall we gather only the Testimonies of such eminent Wits, as would of course descend to posterity, and consequently be read without our collection; but we shall likewise, with incredible labour, seek out for divers others, which, but for this our diligence, could never at the distance of a few months appear to the eye of the most curious. Hereby thou may'st not only receive the delectation of Variety, but also arrive at a more certain judgment, by a grave and circumspect comparison of the Witnesses with each other, or of each with himself. Hence also thou wilt be enabled to draw reflections, not only of a critical, but a moral nature, by being let into many particulars of the Person as well as Genius, and of the Fortune as well as Merit, of our Author: in which if I relate some things of little concern peradventure to thee, and some of as little even to him; I entreat thee to consider how minutely all true critics and commentators are wont to insist upon such, and how material they seem to themselves, if to none other. Forgive me, gentle reader, if (following learned example) I ever and anon become tedious: allow me to take the same pains to find whether my author were good or bad, well or ill-natured, modest or arrogant; as another, whether his author was fair or brown, short or tall, or whether he wore a coat or a cassock.

We purposed to begin with his Life, Parentage and Education: But as to these, even his contemporaries do exceedingly differ. One saith ^a, he was educated at home; another ^b, that he was bred at St Omer's by Jesuits; a third ^c, not at St Omer's, but at Oxford; a fourth ^d, that he had no university-education at all. Those who allow him to be bred at home, differ as much concerning his Tutor: One saith ^e, he was kept by his father on purpose; a second ^f, that he was an itinerant priest; a third ^g, that he was a parson; one ^h calleth him a secular clergyman of the Church of Rome; another ⁱ, a monk. As little do they agree about his Father, whom one ^k supposeth, like the Father of Hesiod a tradesman or merchant; another ^l, a husbandman; another ^m, a hatter, &c. Nor has an author been wanting to give our Poet such a father as Apuleius hath to Plato, Jamblichus to Pythagoras, and divers to Homer, namely, a Dæmon: For thus Mr Gildon ⁿ: “Certain it is, that his original is not from Adam, “but the Devil; and that he wanteth nothing but “horns and tail to be the exact resemblance of his “infernal Father.” Finding, therefore, such contrariety of opinions, and (whatever be ours of this sort of generation) not being fond to enter into controversy, we shall defer writing the life of our Poet, till authors can determine among themselves what Parents or education he had, or whether he had any Education or Parents at all.

Proceed we to what is more certain, his Works, tho’ not less uncertain the judgments concerning them;

Dodd) in the 10th page, declared Gildon to be author of that libel; tho’ in the subsequent editions of his Key he left out this assertion, and affirmed (in the Curliad, p. 4. and 8.) that it was written by Dennis only.

beginning with his ESSAY ON CRITICISM, of which hear first the most ancient of Critics,

Mr JOHN DENNIS.

“His precepts are false or trivial, or both; his “thoughts are crude and abortive, his expressions ab“surd, his numbers harsh and unmusical, his rhymes “trivial and common;—instead of majesty, we have “something that is very mean; instead of gravity, “something that is very boyish; and instead of per-“spicuity and lucid order, we have but too often ob“scurity and confusion.” And in another place:
 “What rare numbers are here! Would not one swear
 “that this youngster had espoused some antiquated “Muse, who had sued out a divorce from some super-“annuated sinner, upon account of impotence, and “who, being poxed by her former spouse, has got the “gout in her decrepid age, which makes her hobble so damnably.”

No less peremptory is the censure of our hypercritical Historian

Mr OLDMIXON.

“I dare not say any thing of the Essay on Criti“cism in verse; but if any more curious reader has “discovered in it something new which is not in Dry-“den’s prefaces, dedications, and his essay on drama“tic poetry, not to mention the French critics, I “should be very glad to have the benefit of the disco“very P.”

He is followed (as in fame, so in judgement) by the modest and simple-minded

Mr LEONARD WELSTED.

Who, out of great respect to our Poet, not naming him, doth yet glance at his Essay, together with the Duke of Buckingham's, and the Criticisms of Dryden, and of Horace, which he more openly taxeth q: “As “to the numerous treatises, essays, arts, &c. both in “verse and prose, that have been written by the mo-“derns on this ground-work, they do but hackney the “same thoughts over again, making them still more trite.
 “Most of their pieces are nothing but a pert, insipid “heap of common place. Horace has even in his Art of “Poetry thrown out several things which plainly shew
 “he thought an Art of Poetry was of no use, even “while he was writing one.”

To all which great authorities, we can only oppose that of

Mr ADDISON.

“r The Art of Criticism (saith he) which was pub“lished some months since, is a master-piece in its “ kind. The observations follow one another, like “ those in Horace’s Art of Poetry, without that me“ thodical regularity which would have been requisite

“ in a prose writer. They are some of them uncommon,
“ but such as the reader must assent to, when he sees “ them explained with that ease and perspicuity in “ which they are delivered. As for those which are “ the most known and the most receiv’d, they are placed “ in so beautiful a light, and illustrated with such apt “ allusions, that they have in them all the graces of “ novelty; and make the reader, who was before ac“ quainted with them, still more convinced of their “ truth and solidity. And here give me leave to men“ tion what Monsieur Boileau has so well enlarged up-
“ on in the preface to his works: That wit and fine “ writing doth not consist so much in advancing things “ that are new, as in giving things that are known an “ agreeable turn. It is impossible for us who live in “ the latter ages of the world, to make observations “ in criticism, morality, or any art or science, which “ have not been touched upon by others; we have “ little else left us, but to represent the common sense of “ mankind in more strong, more beautiful, or more “ uncommon lights. If a reader examines Horace’s “ Art of Poetry, he will find but few precepts in it “ which he may not meet with in Aristotle, and which “ were not commonly known by all the Poets of the “ Augustan age. His way of expressing, and applying “ them, not his invention of them, is what we are “ chiefly to admire.

“ Longinus, in his Reflections, has given us the same “ kind of sublime, which he observes in the several “ passages that occasioned them : I cannot but take “ notice that our English author has after the same man“ ner exemplified several of the precepts in the very “ precepts themselves.” He then produces some instances of a particular beauty in the numbers, and concludes with saying, that “ there are three poems in our tongue of the same nature, and each a masterpiece in its kind: The Essay on Translated Verse;

 the Essay on the Art of Poetry; and the Essay on “ Criticism.”

Of WINDSOR FOREST, positive is the judgment of the affirmative

Mr JOHN DENNIS,

“ s That it is a wretched rhapsody, impudently “ writ in emulation of the Cooper's Hill of Sir John “ Denham : the author of it is obscure, is ambiguous, “ is affected, is temerarious, is barbarous t.”

But the author of the Dispensary,

Dr GARTH,

in the preface to his poem of Claremont, differs from this opinion : Those who have seen these two excellent “ poems of Cooper's Hill, and Windsor Forest, the “ one written by Sir John Denham, the other by Mr “ Pope, will shew a great deal of candor if they ap“ prove of this.”

 mer, 1717.

Of the Epistle of Eloisa, we are told by the obscure writer of a poem called Sawney, "That because
 "Prior's Henry and Emma charm'd the finest tastes,
 "our author writ his Eloise in opposition to it; but "forgot innocence and virtue: If you take away her
 "tender thoughts, and her fierce desires, all the rest
 "is of no value." In which, methinks, his judgment resembleth that of a French taylor on a villa and gardens by the Thames. "All this is very fine, but take away the river, and it is good for nothing."

But very contrary hereunto was the opinion of himself, saying in his Alma^u,

MR PRIOR

O Abelard! ill fated youth,

Thy tale will justify this truth:

But well I weet, thy cruel wrong

Adorns a nobler Poet's song:

Dan Pope, for thy misfortune griev'd,

With kind concern and skill has weav'd

A filken web: and ne'er shall fade

Its colours: gently has he laid

The mantle o'er thy sad distress,

And Venus shall the texture bless, &c.

Come we now to his translation of the ILIA D, celebrated by numerous pens, yet shall it suffice to mention the indefatigable

Sir RICHARD BLACKMORE, Kt.

Who (tho' otherwise a severe censurer of our author) yet styleth this a "laudable translation^w." That ready writer

Mr OLDMIXON,

in his forementioned Essay, frequently commends the same. And the painful

Mr LEWIS THEOBALD

thus extols it ^x, "The spirit of Homer breathes all "through this translation.—I am in doubt, whether
"I should most admire the justness to the original,
"or the force and beauty of the language, or the "founding variety of the numbers: But when I find all "these meet, it puts me in mind of what the poet says of "one of his heroes, That he alone rais'd and flung with "ease a weighty stone, that two common men could "not lift from the ground; just so, one single person "has performed in this translation, what I once de"spaired to have seen done by the force of several mas"terly hands." Indeed, the same gentleman appears "to have changed his sentiment in his Essay on the "Art of sinking in reputation, (printed in Mist's Jour- "nal, March 30. 1728.) where he says thus: "in order
"to sink in reputation, let him take into his head
"to descend into Homer (let the world wonder, as

“ That this translation of the Iliad was not in all ref-“ pects conformable to the fine taste of his friend Mr “ Addison; insomuch that he employed a younger muse
 “ in an undertaking of this kind, which he supervised “ himself.” Whether Mr Addison did find it conformable to his taste or not, best appears from his own testimony the year following its publication, in these words:

MR ADDISON, FREEHOLDER, N^o. 40.

“ When I consider myself as a British freeholder, I “ am in a particular manner pleased with the labours “ of those who have improved our language with the “ translations of old Greek and Latin authors.—We “ have already most of their Historians in our own “ tongue, and what is more for the honour of our lan“ guage, it has been taught to express with elegance
 “ the greatest of their poets in each nation. The illi“ terate among our own countrymen may learn to “ judge from Dryden's Virgil of the most perfect Epic “ performance. And those parts of Homer which have “ been published already by Mr Pope, give us reason “ to think that the Iliad will appear in English with
 “ as little disadvantage to that immortal poem.”

As to the rest, there is a slight mistake, for this younger muse was an elder: Nor was the gentleman (who is a friend of our author) employed by Mr Addison to translate it after him, since he saith himself that he did it before y. Contrariwise, that Mr Addison engaged our author in this work, appeareth by declaration thereof in the preface to the Iliad, printed some time before his death, and by his own letters of October 26, and November 2. 1713, where he declares it is his opinion, that no other person was equal to it.

Next comes his Shakespear on the stage: "Let him
" (quoth one, whom I take to be,

Mr THEOBALD, Mist's Journal, June 8. 1728.

" publish such an author as he has least studied, and " forget to discharge even the dull duty of an editor.
" In this project let him lend the bookseller his name " (for a competent sum of money) to promote the " credit of an exorbitant subscription." Gentle reader, er, be pleased to cast thine eye on the Proposal below quoted, and on what follows (some months after the former assertion) in the same of Journalist of June 8.
" The bookseller proposed the book by subscription,
" and raised some thousands of pounds for the same:
" I believe the gentleman did not share in the profits
" of this extravagant subscription.

y Vid. pref. to Mr Tickel's translation of the first book of the Iliad, quarto.

“ After the Iliad, he undertook (saith

MIST’S JOURNAL, June 8. 1728.)

“ the sequel of that work, the Odysey; and having “ secured the success by a numerous subscription, he “ employed some underlings to perform what, accord“ ing to his proposals, should come from his own “ hands.” To which heavy charge we can in truth oppose nothing but the words of.

MR POPE’S PROPOSAL for the ODYSSEY,

(printed by J. Watts, Jan. 10. 1724.)

“ I take this occasion to declare, that the subscription “ for Shakespear belongs wholly to Mr Tonson: And “ that the benefit of this Proposal is not solely for my “ own use, but for that of two of my friends, who have “ assisted me in this work.” But these very gentlemen are extolled above our poet himself in another of Mist’s Journals, March 30. 1728, saying, “ That he would “ not advise Mr Pope to try the experiment again of “ getting a great part of a book done by assistants, “ lest those extraneous parts should unhappily ascend “ to the sublime, and retard the declension of the “ whole.” Behold! these Underlings are become good writers!

If any say, that before the said Proposals were printed, the subscription was begun without declaration of such assistance; verily those who set it on foot, or (as their term is) secured it, to wit, the right honourable the Lord Viscount HARCOURT, were he living, would testify, and the right honourable the Lord BATHURST, now living, doth testify the same is a falsehood.

Sorry I am, that persons professing to be learned, or of whatever rank of authors, should either falsely tax, or be falsely taxed. Yet let us, who are only reporters, be impartial in our citations, and proceed.

MIST'S JOURNAL, June 8. 1728.

“ Mr Addison raised this author from obscurity, ob“ tained him the acquaintance and friendship of the “ whole body of our nobility, and transferred his power“ ful interests with those great men to this rising bard,
 “ who frequently levied by that means unusual con“ tributions on the public.” Which surely cannot be, if, as the author of The Dunciad dissected reporteth;
 Mr Wycherley had before “ introduced him into a fa“ miliar acquaintance with the greatest Peers and “ brightest Wits then living.”

“ No sooner (saith the same Journalist) was his bo“ dy lifeless, but this author, reviving his resentment, li“ belled the memory of his departed friend; and “ what was still more heinous, made the scandal pub“ lic.” Grievous the accusation! unknown the accuser, the person accused no witness in his own cause; the person, in whose regard accused, dead! but if there be living any one nobleman whose friendship, yea any one gentleman whose subscription Mr Addison procured to our author; let him stand forth, that truth may appear! Amicus Plato, amicus Socrates, sed magis

amica veritas. In verity, the whole story of the libel is a lye; witness those persons of integrity, who, several years before Mr Addison's decease, did see and approve of the said verses, in no wise a libel, but a friendly rebuke sent privately in our author's own hand to Mr Addison himself, and never made public, till after their own Journals, and Curl had printed the same. One name alone, which I am here authorised to declare, will sufficiently evince this truth, that of the right honourable the Earl of BURLINGTON.

Next is he taxed with a crime (in the opinion of some authors, I doubt, more heinous than any in morality) to wit, Plagiarism, from the inventive and quaint-conceited

JAMES-MOORE SMITH, Gent.

“z Upon reading the third volume of Pope's Miscellanies, I found five lines which I thought excellent: and happening to praise them, a gentleman produced a modern comedy (the Rival Modes) published last year, where were the same verses to a tittle.

“These gentlemen are undoubtedly the first plagiarists, that pretend to make a reputation by stealing from a man's works in his own life-time, and out of a public print.” Let us join to this what is written by the author of the Rival Modes, the said Mr James-Moore Smith, in a letter to our author himself, who had informed him, a month before that play was acted, Jan. 27. 1726-7, that “These verses, which he had z Daily Journal, March 18. 1728.

“ before given him leave to insert in it, would be “ known for his, some copies being got abroad. He de“ sires, nevertheless, that since the lines had been read
 “ in his comedy to several, Mr P. would not deprive “ it of them,” &c. Surely, if we add the testimonies of the Lord BOLINGBROKE, of the Lady to whom the said verses were originally addressed, of Hugh Bethel, Esq; and others, who knew them as our author’s, long before the said gentleman composed his play; it is hoped, the ingenuous, that affect not error, will rectify their opinion by the suffrage of so honourable personages.

And yet followeth another charge, insinuating no less than his enmity both to Church and State, which could come from no other informer than the said

Mr JAMES-MOORE SMITH.

“ a The Memoirs of a Parish clerk was a very dull
 “ and unjust abuse of a person who wrote in defence “ of our Religion and Constitution, and who has been “ dead many years.” This seemeth also most untrue; it being known to divers that these Memoirs were written at the seat of the Lord Harcourt in Oxfordshire, before that excellent person (Bishop Burnet’s) death, and many years before the appearance of that history, of which they are pretended to be an abuse.
 Most true it is, that Mr Moore had such a design, and was himself the man who prest Dr Arbuthnot and Mr Pope to assist him therein; and that he borrowed those Memoirs of our author, when that history came forth, with intent to turn them to such abuse. But being able to obtain from our author but one single hint, and either changing his mind, or having more mind than ability, he contented himself to keep the said Memoirs, and read them as his own to all his acquaintance. A noble person there is, into whose company Mr Pope once chanced to introduce him, who well remembereth the conversation of Mr Moore to have turned upon the "Contempt he had for the "work of that reverend prelate, and how full he was

 "of a design he declared himself to have of expo"sing it." This noble Person is the Earl of PETERBOROUGH.

Here in truth should we crave pardon of all the foresaid right honourable and worthy personages, for having mentioned them in the same page with such weekly riff-raff railers and rhymers; but that we had their ever-honoured commands for the same; and that they are introduced not as witnesses in the controversy, but as witnesses that cannot be controverted; not to dispute, but to decide.

Certain it is, that dividing our writers into two classes, of such who were acquaintance, and of such who were strangers to our author; the former are those who speak well, and the other those who speak evil of him. Of the first class, the most noble sums up his character in these lines:

“^b And yet so wond’rous, so sublime a thing,
 “ As the great Iliad scarce could make me sing, “ Unless I justly could at once commend
 “ A good companion, and as firm a friend;
 “ One moral, or a mere well-natur’d deed,
 “ Can all desert in sciences exceed.”

So also is he decyphered by the honourable

SIMON HARCOURT.

“^e Say, wond’rous youth, what column wilt thou “ chuse,
 “ What laurel’d arch, for thy triumphant Muse?
 “ Tho’ each great ancient court thee to his shrine,
 “ Tho’ ev’ry laurel thro’ the dome be thine,
 “ Go to the good and just, an awful train!
 “ Thy soul’s delight.——

Recorded in like manner for his virtuous disposition, and gentle bearing, by the ingenious

Mr WALTER HART,

in this apostrophe:

“^d O! ever worthy, ever crown’d with praise!
 “ Blest in thy life and blest in all thy lays.
 “ Add, that the Sisters ev’ry thought refine,
 “ And ev’n thy life, be faultless as thy line.

“ Yet envy still with fiercer rage pursues, “ Obscures the virtue, and defames the Muse.
 “ A soul like thine, in pain, in grief, resign’d,
 “ Views with just scorn the malice of mankind.”

The witty and moral satirist

Dr EDWARD YOUNG,

wishing some check to the corruption and evil manners of the times, calleth out upon our poet to undertake a task so worthy of his virtue:

“ e Why slumbers Pope, who leads the Muse’s “ train,
 “ Nor hears that Virtue, which he loves, complain?

Mr MALLET,

In his Epistle on Verbal Criticism:

“ Whose life, severely scan’d, transcends his lays:
 “ For wit supreme, is but his second praise.”.

Mr HAMMOND,

That delicate and correct imitator of Tibullus, in his Love Elegies, Elegy xiv.

“ Now, fir’d by Pope, and Virtue, leave the age,
 “ In low pursuit of self-undoing wrong,
 “ And trace the author thro’ his moral page,
 “ Whose blameless life still answers to his song.”

e Universal Passion, sat. 1.

Mr THOMSON,

In his elegant and philosophical poem of the Seasons:

“ Altho’ not sweeter his own Homer sings,
“ Yet is his life the more endearing song.”

To the same tune also singeth that learned clerk of Suffolk,

Mr WILLIAM BROOME.

“ Thus, nobly rising in fair Virtue’s cause,
“ From thy own life transcribe th’ unerring laws.”

And, to close all, hear the reverend dean of St Patrick’s:

“ A Soul with ev’ry virtue fraught,
“ By Patriots, Priests, and Poets taught.
“ Whose filial piety excels “ Whatever Grecian story tells.
“ A genius for each bus’ness fit,
“ Whose meanest talent is his Wit, &c.

Let us now recreate thee by turning to the other side, and shewing his Character drawn by those with whom he never conversed, and whose countenances he could not know, though turned against him: First again commencing with the high voiced and never enough quoted

Mr JOHN DENNIS,

Who, in his Reflections on the Essay on Criticism, thus describeth him: “A little affected hypocrite, who has “nothing in his mouth but candour, truth, friendship, “good-nature, humanity, and magnanimity. He is so “great a lover of falshood, that, whenever he has a “mind to calumniate his cotemporaries, he brands “them with some defect which is just contrary to some “good quality, for which all their friends and their acquaintance commend them. He seems to have a “particular pique to People of Quality, and authors
 “of that rank.—He must derive his religion from St “Omer’s.”—But in the Character of Mr P. and his writings, (printed by S. Popping, 1716) he saith, “Though he is a professor of the worst religion, yet
 “he laughs at it,” but that “nevertheless, he is a virulent Papist; and yet a Pillar for the Church of “England.”

Of both which opinions

Mr LEWIS THEOBALD

seems also to be; declaring, in Mist’s Journal of June 22. 1718, That, if he is not shrewdly abused, “he “made it his practice to cackle to both parties in their “own sentiments.” But, as to his pique against People of Quality, the same Journalist doth not agree, but saith, (May 8. 1728.) “He had, by some means

“or other, the acquaintance and friendship of the “whole body of our nobility.”

However contradictory this may appear, Mr Dennis and Gildon, in the character last cited, make it all plain, by assuring us, “That he is a creature that reconciles all contradictions; he is a beast, and a man; a Whig, and a Tory; a writer (at one and the same time) of Guardians and Examiners; an Assertor of liberty, and of the dispensing power of Kings; a Jesuitical professor of truth; a base and a foul pretender to candour.” So that, upon the whole account, we must conclude him either to have been a great hypocrite, or a very honest man; a terrible imposer upon both parties, or very moderate to either.

Be it as to the judicious reader shall seem good. Sure it is, he is little favoured of certain authors, whose wrath is perilous: For one declares he ought to have a price set on his head, and to be hunted down as a wild beast^h. Another protests that he does not know what may happen; advises him to insure his person; says he has bitter enemies, and expressly declares it will be well if he *escapes with his life*ⁱ. One desires he would cut his own throat; or hang himself^k. But Pasquin seemed rather inclined it should be done by the Government, representing him engaged in grievous designs with a Lord of Parliament, then under prosecution^l. Mr Dennis himself hath written to a Minister

And one Mathew Concanen, yet more impudent, publishes at length the two most SACRED NAMES in this Nation, as Members of the Dunciad q!

This is prodigious! yet it is almost as strange, that in the midst of these invectives his greatest Enemies have (I know not how) borne testimony to some merit in him.

after having violently attacked him in many pieces, at last came to wish from his heart, “ That Mr Pope

Although he says, "The smooth numbers of the Dunciad are all that recommend it, nor has it any other merit;" yet that same paper hath these words: "The author is allowed to be a perfect master of an easy and elegant versification. In all his works we find the most happy turns, and natural similies, wonderfully short and thick sown."

The Essay on the Dunciad also owns, p. 25. it is very full of beautiful images. But the panegyric, which crowns all that can be said on this poem, is bestowed by our Laureate, who "grants it to be a better Poem of its kind than ever was writ:" but adds, "it was a victory over a parcel of poor wretches, whom it was almost cowardice to conquer.—A man might as well triumph for having killed so many silly flies that offended him. Could he have let them alone, by this time, poor souls! they had all been buried in oblivion y." Here we see our excellent Laureate allows the justice of the satire on every man in it, but himself; as the great Mr Dennis did before him.

The said

 "sed with it, and hope you will meet with that encourage-

"Now is it not plain, that any one who sends such compli"ments to another, has not been used to write in partnership "with him to whom he sends them?" Dennis remarks on the Dunc. p. 50. Mr Dennis is therefore welcome to take this piece to himself.

Of his Essay on Man, numerous were the praises bestowed by his avowed enemies, in the imagination that the same was not written by him, as it was printed anonymously.

Thus sang of it even

BEZALEEL MORRIS.

“ Auspicious bard ! while all admire thy strain,
 “ All but the selfish, ignorant. and vain,
 “ I, whom no bribe to servile flatt’ry drew,
 “ Must pay the tribute to thy merit due :

Mr LEONARD WELSTED

thus wrote ^a to the unknown author, on the first publication of the said Essay : “ I must own, after the reception which the vilest and most immoral ribaldry hath lately met with, I was surprised to see what I had long despaired, a performance deserving the name of a poet. Such, Sir, is your work. It is, indeed, above all commendation, and ought to have been published in an age and country more worthy of it. If my testimony be of weight any where, you are sure to have it in the amplest manner,” &c. &c. &c.

Thus we see every one of his works hath been extolled by one or other of his most inveterate Enemies ; and to the success of them all they do unanimously give testimony. But it is sufficient, instar omnium, to behold the great critic, Mr Dennis, sorely lamenting it, even from the Essay on criticism to this day of the Dunciad! “A most notorious instance (quoth he) of the depravity of genius and taste, the approbation this Essay meets with ^b—I can safely affirm, that I never attacked any of these writings, unless they had success infinitely beyond their merit.—This, though an empty, has been a popular scribbler. The epidemic madness of the times has given him reputation ^c.—If, after the cruel treatment so many extraordinary men (Spencer, Lord Bacon, Ben Johnson, Milton, Butler, Otway, and others) have received from this country, for these last hundred years, I should shift the scene, and shew all that penury changed at once to riot and profuseness; and more squandered away upon one object, than would have satisfied the greater part of those extraordinary men; the reader to whom this one creature should be unknown, would fancy him a prodigy of art and nature, would believe that all the great qualities of these persons were centered in him alone. But if I should venture to assure him, that the People of England had made such a choice—the reader would either believe me a malicious enemy, and slanderer; or that the reign of the last (Queen Anne’s) Ministry was designed by fate to encourage fools ^d.”

^d Rem. on Homer, p. 8. 9.

But it happens, that this our Poet never had any Place, Pension, or Gratuity, in any shape, from the said glorious Queen, or any of her Ministers. All he owed, in the whole course of his life, to any court, was a subscription, for his Homer, of L. 200 from K. George I, and L. 100 from the prince and princess.

However, lest we imagine our Author's Success was constant and universal, they acquaint us of certain works in a less degree of repute, whereof, although owned by others, yet do they assure us he is the writer. Of this sort Mr DENNIS ^e ascribes to him two Farces, whose names he does not tell, but assures us that there is not one jest in them: And an imitation of Horace, whose title he does not mention, but assures us it is much more execrable than all his works ^f. The DAILY JOURNAL, May 11, 1728. assures us, "He is below "Tom Durfey in the Drama, because (as that writer "thinks) the Marriage Hater matched, and the Boarding "School are better than the What-d'ye-call-it;" which is not Mr P.'s, but Mr Gay's. Mr GILDON assures us, in his New Rehearsal, p 48 "That he was "writing a play of the Lady Jane Grey;" but it afterwards proved to be Mr Row's. We are assured by another, "He wrote a pamphlet called Dr Andrew "Tripe ^g;" which proved to be one Dr Wagstaff's. Mr THEOBALD assures us, in Mist of the 27th of April, "That the treatise of the Profound is very dull, and "that Mr Pope is the author of it." The writer of Gulliveriana is of another opinion; and says, “the whole, or greatest part, of the merit of this treatise must and can only be ascribed to Gulliver ^h.” [Here, gentle reader! cannot I but smile at the strange blindness and positiveness of men; knowing the said treatise to appertain to none other but to me, Martinus Scriblerus.]

We are assured, in Mist of June 8, “That his own Plays and Farces would better have adorned the Dunciad, than those of Mr Theobald; for he had neither genius for Tragedy nor Comedy.” Which whether true or not, is not easy to judge; in as much as he hath attempted neither. Unless we will take it for granted, with Mr Cibber, that his being once very angry at hearing a friend’s Play abused, was an infallible proof the Play was his own; the said Mr Cibber thinking it impossible for a man to be much concerned for any but himself: “Now let any man judge (saith he) by this concern, who was the true mother of the child ⁱ?”

But from all that hath been said, the discerning reader will collect, that it little availed our author to have any Candour, since when he declared he did not write for others, it was not credited; as little to have any Modesty, since, when he declined writing in any way himself, the presumption of others was imputed to him. If he singly enterprised one great work, he was taxed of Boldness and Madness to a Prodigy ^k: If he took assistants in another, it was complained of, and represented as a great injury to the public¹. The loftiest heroics, the lowest ballads, treatises against the state or church, satires on lords and ladies, raillery on wits and authors, squabbles with booksellers, or even full and true accounts of monsters, poisons, and murders; of any hereof was there nothing so good, nothing so bad, which hath not at one or other season been to him ascribed. If it bore no author's name, then lay he concealed: if it did, he fathered it upon that author to be yet better concealed: If it resembled any of his styles, then was it evident; if it did not, then disguised he it on set purpose. Yea, even direct oppositions in religion, principles, and politics, have equally been supposed in him inherent. Surely a most rare and singular character! of which let the reader make what he can.

Doubtless most Commentators would hence take occasion to turn all to their Author's advantage, and from the testimony of his very Enemies would affirm, That his Capacity was boundless, as well as his Imagination; that he was a perfect master of all Styles; and all Arguments; and that there was in those times no other Writer in any kind, of any degree of excellence, save he himself. But as this is not our own sentiment, we shall determine on

MARTINUS SCRIBLERUS

OF THE POEM.

THIS poem, as it celebrateth the most grave and ancient of things, Chaos, Night, and Darkness; so is it of the most grave and ancient kind. Homer (saith Aristotle) was the first who gave the Form, and (saith Horace) who adapted the Measure, to heroic poesy. But even before this, may be rationally presumed from what the Ancients have left written, was a piece by Homer composed, of like nature and matter with this of our Poet. For of Epic sort it appeareth to have been, yet of matter surely not unpleasant; witness what is reported of it by the learned Archbishop Eustathius, in Odyss. x. And accordingly Aristotle, in his Poetic, chap. iv. doth further set forth, that as the Iliad and Odyssy gave example to Tragedy, so did this poem to Comedy its first idea.

From these authors also it should seem, that the Hero, or chief personage of it was no less obscure, and his understanding and sentiments no less quaint and strange (if indeed not more so) than any of the actors of our poem. MARGITES was the name of this personage, whom Antiquity reordeth to have been Dunce the first; and surely from what we hear of him, not unworthy to be the root of so spreading a tree, and so numerous a posterity. The poem therefore celebrating him, was properly and absolutely a Dunciad; which though now unhappily lost, yet is its nature sufficiently known by the infallible tokens aforesaid. And thus it doth appear, that the first Dunciad was the first Epic poem, written by Homer himself, and anterior even to the Iliad or Odyssey.

Now, forasmuch as our poet hath translated those two famous works of Homer which are yet left, he did conceive it in some sort his duty to imitate that also which was lost: and was therefore induced to bestow on it the same form which Homer's is reported to have had, namely, that of Epic poem; with a title also framed after the ancient Greek manner, to wit, that of Duncid.

Wonderful it is, that so few of the moderns have been stimulated to attempt some Dunciad! since in the opinion of the multitude, it might cost less pain and toil than an imitation of the greater Epic. But possible it is also, that, on due reflection, the maker might find it easier to paint a Charlemagne, a Brute, or a Godfrey, with just pomp and dignity heroic, than a Margites, a Codrus, or a Fleckno.

We shall next declare the occasion and the cause which moved our poet to this particular work. He lived in those days, when (after Providence had permitted the invention of Printing as a scourge for the sins of the learned) Paper also became so cheap, and Printers so numerous, that a deluge of authors covered the land: Whereby not only the Peace of the honest unwriting subject was daily molested, but unmerciful demands were made of his applause, yea of his money, by such as would neither earn the one, nor deserve the other. At the same time, the license of the Press was such, that it grew dangerous to refuse them either: for they would forthwith publish slanders unpunished, the authors being anonymous, and skulking under the wings of publishers, a set of men who never scrupled to vend either Calumny or Blasphemy, as long as the Town would call for it.

^a Now our author, living in those times, did conceive it an endeavour well worthy an honest Satirist, to dissuade the dull, and punish the wicked, the only way that was left. In that public-spirited view he laid the plan of this poem, as the greatest service he was capable (without much hurt, or being slain) to render his dear country. First, taking things from their original, he considereth the causes creative of such Authors, namely, Dulness and Poverty; the one born with them, the other contracted by neglect of their proper talents, through self-conceit of greater abilities. This truth he wrappeth in an Allegory ^b (as the construction of Epic poesy requireth) and feigns that one of these Goddesses had taken up her abode with the other, and that they jointly inspired all such writers and such works. ^c He proceedeth to shew the qualities they bestow on these authors, and the effects they produce ^d: then the materials, or stock, with which they furnish them ^e; and (above all) that self-opinion ^f which causeth it to seem to themselves vastly greater than it is, and is the prime motive of their setting up in this sad and sorry merchandise. The great power of these Goddesses acting in alliance (where of as the one is the mother of Industry, so is the other of Plodding) was to be exemplified in some one, great and remarkable Action g; and none could be more so than that which our poet hath chosen; viz. the restoration of the reign of Chaos and Night, by the ministry of Dulness their daughter, in the removal of her imperial seat from the City to the polite World; as the Action of the Æneid is the restoration of the empire of Troy, by the removal of the race from thence to Latium. But as Homer singing only the Wrath of Achilles, yet includes in his Poem the whole history of the Trojan war; in like manner our author hath drawn into this single Action the whole history of Dulness and her children.

A Person must next be fixed upon to support this Action. This Phantom in the Poet's mind must have a Name h: He finds it to be——; and he becomes of course the Hero of the poem

The Fable being thus, according to the best example, one and entire, as contained in the Proposition; the Machinery is a continued chain of Allegories, setting forth the whole Power, Ministry, and Empire of Dulness, extended through her subordinate instruments, in all her various operations.

This is branched into Episodes, each of which hath its Moral apart, though all conducive to the main end. The Crowd assembled in the second book, demonstrates g Bossu, chap. vii. viii.

h Bossu, chap. viii. Vide Aristot. Poetic. cap. ix.

the design to be more extensive than to bad poets only, and that we may expect other Episodes of the Patrons, Encouragers, or Paymasters of such authors, as occasion shall bring them forth. And the third book, if well considered, seemeth to embrace the whole World. Each of the Games relateth to some or other vile class of writers: The first concerneth the plagiarist, to whom he giveth the name of More; the second the libellous Novelist, whom he stileth Eliza; the third, the flattering Dedicator; the fourth, the Bawling Critic, or noisy Poet; the fifth, the dark and dirty Party-writer; and so of the rest: assigning to each some proper name or other, such as he could find.

As for the Characters, the public hath already acknowledged how justly they are drawn: The manners are so depicted, and the sentiments so peculiar to those to whom applied, that surely to transfer them to any other or wiser personages, would be exceeding difficult: And certain it is, that every person concerned, being consulted apart, hath readily owned the resemblance of every portrait, his own excepted. So Mr Cibber calls them, “a parcel of poor wretches, so many “silly flies ⁱ: but adds, our Author’s wit is remarkably “more bare and barren, whenever it would fall foul “on Cibber, than upon any other Person whatever.”

The Descriptions are singular, the Comparisons very quaint, the Narration various, yet of one colour: The purity and chastity of Diction is so preserved, that in the places most suspicious, not the words but only the images have been censured, and yet are those images no other than have been sanctified by ancient and classical Authority (though, as was the manner of those good times, not so curiously wrapped up) yea, and commented upon by the most grave Doctors, and approved Critics.

As it beareth the name of Epic, it is thereby subjected to such severe indispensable rules as are laid on all Neoterics, a strict imitation of the Ancients; inso-much that any deviation, accompanied with whatever poetic beauties, hath always been censured by the sound Critic. How exact that Imitation hath been in this piece, appeareth not only by its general structure, but by particular allusions infinite, many whereof have escaped both the commentator and poet himself; yea divers by his exceeding diligence are so altered and interwoven with the rest, that several have already been, and more will be, by the ignorant abused, as altogether and originally his own.

In a word, the whole poem proveth itself to be the work of our author when his faculties were in full vigour and perfection; at that exact time when years have ripened the Judgment, without diminishing the Imagination: which, by good Critics, is held to be punctually at forty. For, at that season it was that Virgil finished his Georgics; and Sir Richard Blackmore at the like age composing his Arthurs, declared, the same to be the very Acme and pitch of life for Epic poesy: Though since he hath altered it to sixty, the year in which he published his Alfred^k. True it is, that the talents for Criticism, namely smartness, quick censure, vivacity of remark, certainty of asseveration, indeed all but acerbity, seem rather the gifts of Youth than of riper age: But it is far otherwise in Poetry; witness the works of Mr Rymer and Mr Dennis, who beginning with Criticism, became afterwards such Poets as no age hath paralleled. With good reason therefore did our author chuse to write his Essay on that subject at twenty, and reserve for his maturer years this great and wonderful work of the Dunciad.

VOL. III.

I

RICARDUS ARISTARCHUS

OF THE

HERO of the POEM.

OF the Nature of Dunciad in general, whence derived, and on what authority founded as well as of the art and conduct of this our poem in particular, the learned and laborious Scriblerus hath, according to his manner, and with tolerable share of judgment, dissertated. But when he cometh to speak of the Person of the Hero fitted for such poem, in truth he miserably halts and hallucinates. For, misled by one Monsieur Bossu a Gallic critic, he prateth of I cannot tell what Phantom of a Hero, only raised up to support the Fable. A putid conceit! As if Homer and Virgil, like modern Undertakers, who first build their house, and then seek out for a tenant, had contrived the story of a War and a Wandering, before they once thought either of Achilles or Æneas. We shall therefore set our good brother and the world also right in this particular, by assuring them, that, in the greater Epic, the prime intention of the Muse is to exalt Heroic Virtue, in order to propagate the love of it among the children of men; and consequently, that the Poet's first thought must needs be turned upon a real subject meet for laud and celebration; not one whom he is to make, but one whom he may find, truly illustrious. This is the primum mobile of his poetic world, whence every thing is to receive life and motion. For, this subject being found, he is immediately ordained, or rather acknowledged, an Hero, and put upon such action as becometh the dignity of his character.

But the Muse ceaseth not here her Eagle-flight. For sometimes, fatiated with the contemplation of these Suns of glory, she turneth downward on her wing, and darts with Jove's lightning on the Goose and Serpent kind. For we may apply to the Muse in her various moods, what an ancient master of Wisdom affirmeth of the Gods in general: "Si Dii non irascuntur impiis et injustis, nec pios utique justosque diligunt. In rebus enim diversis, aut in utramque partem moveri necesse est, aut in neutram. Itaque qui bonos diligit, et malos odit; et qui malos non odit, nec bonos diligit. Quia et diligere bonos ex odio malorum venit; et malos odire ex bonorum caritate descendit." Which in our vernacular idiom may be thus interpreted: "If the Gods be not provoked at evil men, neither are they delighted with the good and just. For contrary objects must either excite contrary affections, or no affections at all. So that he who loveth good men, must at the same time hate the bad; and he who hateth not bad men, cannot love the good; because to love good men proceedeth from an aversion to evil, and to hate evil men from a tenderness to the good." From this delicacy of the Muse arose the little Epic, (more lively and choleric than her elder sister, whose bulk and complexion incline her to the flegmatic) and for this some notorious Vehicle of vice and folly was sought out, to make thereof an example. An early instance of which (nor could it escape the accurate Scriblerus) the Father of Epic poem himself affordeth us. From him the practice descended to the Greek Dramatic-poets, his offspring; who in the composition of their Tetralogy, or set of four pieces, were wont to make the last a Satiric Tragedy. Happily one of these ancient Dunciads (as we may well term it) is come down unto us amongst the Tragedies of the poet Euripides. And what doth the reader suppose may be the subject thereof? Why in truth, and it is worthy observation, the unequal Contention of an old, dull, debauched buffoon Cyclops, with the heaven-directed Favourite of Minerva; who, after having quietly born all the monster's obscene and impious ribaldry, endeth the farce in punishing him with the mark of an indelible brand in his forehead. May we not then be excused, if for the future we consider the Epics of Homer, Virgil, and Milton, together with this our poem, as a complete Tetralogy, in which the last worthily holdeth the place or station of the satiric piece?

Proceed we therefore in our subject. It hath been long, and, alas for pity! still remaineth a question, whether the Hero of the greater Epic should be an honest Man? or, as the French critics express it, un honnête homme^a: but it never admitted of any doubt, but that the Hero of the little Epic should be just the contrary. Hence, to the advantage of our Dunciad, we may observe how much juster the Moral of that Poem must needs be, where so important a question is previously decided.

But then it is not every Knave, nor (let me add) every Fool, that is a fit subject for a Dunciad. There must still exist some Analogy, if not Resemblance of Qualities between the Heroes of the two Poems; and and this in order to admit what Neoteric critics call the Parody, one of the liveliest graces of the little Epic. Thus it being agreed, that the constituent qualities of the greater Epic Hero, are Wisdom, Bravery, and Love, from whence springeth heroic Virtue; it followeth, that those of the lesser Epic Hero, should be Vanity, Impudence and Debauchery, from which happy assemblage resulteth Heroic Dulness, the never-dying subject of this our Poem,

This being confessed, come we now to particulars. It is the character of true Wisdom, to seek its chief support and confidence within itself; and to place that support in the resources which proceed from a conscious rectitude of Will. And are the advantages of Vanity, when arising to the heroic standard, at all short of this self-complacence? Nay, are they not, in the opinion of the enamoured owner, far beyond it? "Let the world (will such an one say) impute, to me
" what folly or weakness they please; but till Wis- " dom can give me something that will make me more
" heartily happy, I am content to be GAZED AT ^b." This, we see, is Vanity according to the heroic gage

^b Ded. to the Life of C. C.

or measure; not that low and ignoble species which pretendeth to Virtues we have not, but the laudable ambition of being gazed at for glorying in those Vices, which every body knows we have. “The world may ask (says he) why I make my follies public? Why not? I have passed my time very pleasantly with them ^c.” In short, there is no sort of Vanity such a Hero would scruple, but that which might go near to degrade him from his high station in this our Dunciad; namely, “whether it would not be Vanity in him, to take shame to himself for not being a wise man ^d?”

Bravery, the second attribute of the true Hero, is Courage manifesting itself in every limb; while its correspondent Virtue in the mock Hero, is, that same Courage all collected into the Face. And as Power when drawn together, must needs have more force and spirit than when dispersed, we generally find this kind of courage in so high and heroic a degree, that it insults not only Men, but Gods. Mezentius is without doubt the bravest character in all the Æneis: But how? His bravery, we know, was an high courage of blasphemy. And can we say less of this brave man’s, who having told us that he placed “his Summum bonum” in those follies, which he was not content barely to possess but would likewise glory in,” adds, “If I am misguided, ’TIS NATURE’S FAULT, and I follow HER ^e.” Nor can we be mistaken in making this happy quality a species of Courage, when we consider those illustrious marks of it, which made his FACE “ more known (as he justly boasteth) than most in the “ kingdom,” and his Language to consist of what we must allow to be the most daring Figure of Speech, that which is taken from the Name of God.

Gentle Love, the next ingredient in the true Hero’s composition, is a meer bird of passage, or (as Shakespear calls it) summer-teeming Lust, and evaporates in the heat of Youth; doubtless by that refinement it suffers in passing through those certain strainers which our Poet somewhere speaketh of. But when it is let alone to work upon the Lees, it acquireth strength by Old age; and becometh a lasting ornament to the little Epic. It is true indeed, there is one objection to its fitness for such an use: For not only the Ignorant may think it common, but it is admitted to be so, even by Him who best knoweth its value. “ Don’t you think “ (argueth he) to say only a man has his Whore f, “ ought to go for little or nothing? Because defendit “ numerus, take the first ten thousand men you meet,
 “ and, I believe, you would be no loser if you betted “ ten to one, that every single sinner of them, one
 “ with another, had been guilty of the same frailty g.”
 But here he seemeth not to have done justice to himself: The man is sure enough a Hero, who hath his Lady at fourscore. How doth his Modesty herein lessen the merit of a whole well-spent Life: not taking to himself the commendation (which Horace accounted the greatest in a theatrical character) of continuing to the very dregs, the same he was from the beginning,

———Servetur ad IMUM

Qualis ab incepto processerat.——

But here, in justice both to the Poet and the Hero, let us farther remark, that the calling her his whore, implieth she was his own, and not his neighbour's. Truly a commendable Continnence! and such as Scipio himself must have applauded. For how much Self-denial was exerted not to covet his Neighbour's whore? and what disorders must the coveting her have occasioned in that Society, where (according to this Political Calculator) nine in ten of all ages have their concubines?

We have now, as briefly as we could devise, gone through the three constituent Qualities of either Hero. But it is not in any, or in all of these, that Heroism properly or essentially resideth. It is a lucky result rather from the collision of these lively Qualities against one another. Thus, as from Wisdom, Bravery, and Love, ariseth Magnanimity, the object of Admiration, which is the aim of the greater Epic; so from Vanity, Impudence and Debauchery, springeth Buffoonry, the source of Ridicule that “laughing ornament,” as he well termeth it ^h, of the little Epic.

^h Letter to Mr P. p. 31.

He is not ashamed (God forbid he ever should be ashamed!) of this Character; who deemeth, that not Reason but Risibility distinguisheth the human Species from the brutal. “As Nature (saith this profound Philosopher) distinguished our species from the mute creation by our Risibility, her design MUST have been by that Faculty as evidently to raise our HAPPINESS, as by our os sublime (OUR ERECTED FACES) to lift the dignity of our FORM above them i.” All this considered, how complete a Hero must he be, as well as how happy a Man, whose Risibility lieth not barely in his muscles, as in the common sort, but (as himself informeth us) in his very spirits? and whose Os sublime is not simply an erect face, but a brazen head, as should seem by his preferring it to one of Iron, said to belong to the late king of Sweden k?

But whatever personal qualities a Hero may have, the examples of Achilles and Æneas shew us, that all those are of small avail, without the constant assistance of the Gods: for the subversion and erection of Empires have never been adjudged the work of Man. How greatly soever then we may esteem of his high talents, we can hardly conceive his personal prowess alone sufficient to restore the decayed empire of Dulness. So weighty an atchievement must require the particular favour of the GREAT: who being the natural patrons and supporters of Letters, as the ancient Gods were of Troy, must first be drawn off and engaged in another interest, before the total subversion of them can be accomplished. To surmount, therefore, this last and greatest difficulty, we have, in this excellent man, a professed Favourite and Intimado of the Great. And look, of what force ancient Piety was to draw the Gods into the party of Æneas, that, and much stronger is modern Incense to engage the Great in the party of Dulness.

Thus we have essayed to pourtray or shadow out this noble Imp of Fame. But now the impatient reader will be apt to say, if so many and various graces go to the making up a Hero, what mortal shall suffice to bear his character? Ill hath he read, who seeth not, in every trace of this picture, that individual, ALL-ACCOMPLISHED PERSON, in whom these rare virtues and lucky circumstances have agreed to meet and centre with the strongest lustre and fullest harmony.

The good Scriblerus indeed, nay the World itself, might be imposed on in the late spurious editions, by I can't tell what Sham-Hero or Phantom: But it was not so easy to impose on HIM whom this egregious error most of all concerned. For no sooner had the fourth book laid open the high and swelling scene, but he recognized his own heroic Acts: And when he came to the words,

Soft on her lap her Laureat son reclines,

(though Laureat imply no more than one crowned with laurel, as becometh any Associate or Consort in Empire) he loudly resented this indignity to violated Majesty. Indeed not without cause, he being there represented as fast asleep; so misbecoming the eye of empire, which, like that of providence, should never doze nor slumber. “Hah! (saith he) fast asleep, it seems! “that’s a little too strong. Pert and dull at least you “might have allowed me, but as seldom asleep as any “fool ^l.” However, the injured Hero may comfort himself with this reflexion, that tho’ it be a sleep, yet it is not the sleep of death, but of immortality. Here he will ^m live at least, tho’ not awake; and in no worse condition than many an enchanted Warrior before him. The famous Durandarte, for instance, was, like him, cast into a long slumber by Merlin the British Bard and Necromancer: and his example for submitting to it with a good grace, might be of use to our Hero. For that disastrous knight being sorely pressed or driven to make his answer by several persons of quality, only replied with a sigh, Patience, and shuffle the cards ⁿ.

But now, as nothing in this world, no not the most sacred or perfect things either of Religion or Government, can escape the sting of Envy, methinks I already hear these carpers objecting to the clearness of our Hero’s title.

It would never (say they) have been esteemed sufficient to make an Hero for the Iliad or Æneis, that Achilles was brave enough to overturn one Empire, or Æneas pious enough to raise another, had they not been Goddess-born and Princes bred. What then did this Author mean, by erecting a Player instead of one of his Patrons, (a person “ never a hero even on “ the stage o”) to this dignity of Colleague in the empire of Dulness, and Atchiever of a work that neither old Omar, Attila, nor John of Leyden could entirely bring to pass.

To all this we have, as we conceive, a sufficient answer from the Roman historian, fabrum esse suæ quemque fortunæ: that every man is the Smith of his own fortune.
The politic Florentine, Nicholas Machiavel, goeth still farther, and affirmeth that a man needeth but to believe himself a Hero to be one of the worthiest. “ Let “ him (saith he) but fancy himself capable of the high“ est things, and he will of course be able to atchieve “ them.” From this principle it follows, that nothing can exceed our Hero’s prowess; as nothing ever equalled the greatness of his conceptions. Hear how he constantly paragon himself: at one time to ALEX-ANDER the Great and CHARLES the XII. of SWEDEN, for the excess and delicacy of his Ambition p; to HEN-RY the IVth of FRANCE, for honest Policy q; to the first BRUTUS, for love of Liberty r; and to Sir RO-BERT WALPOLE, for good Government while in power s: At another time, to the godlike SOCRATES,

TAIGNE, and Sir WILLIAM TEMPLE, for an elegant Vanity that maketh them for ever read and admired u;

in a word, to the right reverend the Lord BISHOP of LONDON himself in the art of writing pastoral Letters^x.

Nor did his Actions fall short of the sublimity of his Conceit. In his early youth he met the Revolution y face to face in Nottingham, at a time when his betters contented themselves with following her. It was here he got acquainted with Old Battle-array, of whom he hath made so honourable mention in one of his immortal Odes. But he shone in Courts as well as Camps: He was called up when the nation fell in labour of this Revolution z; and was a gossip at her christening, with the Bishop and the ladies a.

As to his Birth, it is true he pretendeth no relation either to Heathen God or Goddess; but, what is as good, he was descended from a Maker of both b. And that he did not pass himself on the world for a Hero, as well by birth as education, was his own fault: For, his lineage he bringeth into his life as an Anecdote, and is sensible he had it in his power to be thought no body's son at all c: And what is that but coming into the world a Hero?

But be it (the punctilious Laws of Epic Poesy so requiring) that a Hero of more than mortal birth must needs be had, even for this we have a remedy. We can easily derive our Hero's Pedigree from a Goddess of no small power and authority amongst men; and legitimate and instal him after the right classical and authentic fashion : For, like as the ancient Sages found a Son of Mars in a mighty warrior ; a Son of Neptune in a skilful Seaman ; a Son of Phœbus in a harmonious Poet ; so have we here, if need be, a Son of FORTUNE in an artful Gamester. And who fitter than the offspring of Chance, to assist in restoring the Empire of Night and Chaos ?

There is in truth another objection of greater weight, namely, “ That this Hero still existeth, and “ hath not yet finished his earthly course. For if So-“ lon said well,

——ultima semper

Expectanda dies homini: dicique beatus

Ante obitum nemo supremaque funera debet ;

“ if no man can be called happy till his death, surely “ much less can any one, till then, be pronounced a “ Hero: this species of men being far more subject
“ than others to the caprices of Fortune and Hu“ mour. ” But to this also we have an answer, that will (we hope) be deemed decisive. It cometh from himself, who, to cut this matter short, hath solemnly protested that he will never change or amend.

With regard to his Vanity, he declareth that nothing shall ever part them. “ Nature (saith he) hath “ amply supplied me in Vanity ; a pleasure which “ neither the pertness of Wit, nor the gravity of “ Wisdom, will ever persuade me to part with d.”
Our poet had charitably endeavoured to administer a cure to it : But he telleth us plainly, “ My superiors “ perhaps may be mended by him ; but for my part
“ I own myself incorrigible. I look upon my Follies

“ as the best part of my Fortune^e.” And with good reason : We see to what they have brought him.

Secondly, as to Buffoonry, “ Is it (saith he) a time “ of day for me to leave off these fooleries, and set up
“ a new character ? I can no more put off my Follies “ than my Skin ; I have often tried, but they stick too “ close to me ; nor am I sure my friends are displeased
“ with them, for in this light I afford them frequent
“ matter of mirth, &c. &c^f.” Having then so publicly declared himself incorrigible, he is become dead in law, (I mean the law Epopæian) and devolveth upon the Poet as his property : who may take him, and deal with him, as if he had been dead as long as an old Egyptian hero ; that is to say, embowel and embalm him for posterity.

Nothing therefore (we conceive) remaineth to hinder his own prophecy of himself from taking immediate effect. A rare felicity ! and what few prophets have had the satisfaction to see, alive ! nor can we conclude better than with that extraordinary one of his, which is conceived in these oraculous words, MY DULNESS WILL FIND SOMEBODY TO DO IT RIGHT &c.

The history of the Republic of the United States of America, from its first settlement to the present time, is a subject of great interest and importance. It is a subject which has attracted the attention of the people of all nations, and which has been the subject of many valuable works of history and literature. The history of the United States is a history of progress, of growth, and of achievement. It is a history which has shown the world the power of a free people, and the strength of a united front. It is a history which has inspired the hearts of men everywhere, and which has shown the way to a better future for all.

*THE Proposition, the Invocation, and the Inscription.
Then the Original of the great Empire of Dulness, and cause of the continuance thereof The College of the Goddess in the City, with her private Academy for Poets in particular; the Governors of it, and the four Cardinal Virtues. Then the Poem haltes into the midst of things, presenting her, on the evening of a Lord Mayor's day, revolving the long succession of her Sons, and the glories past and to come. She* fixes her eye on Bays to be the Instrument of that great Event which is the Subject of the Poem. He is described pensive among his Books, giving up the Cause, and apprehending the Period of her Empire: After debating whether to betake himself to the Church, or to Gaming, or to Party-writing, he raises an Altar of proper books, and (making first his solemn prayer and declaration) purposes thereon to sacrifice all his unsuccessful writings. As the pile is kindled, the Goddess, beholding the flame from her seat, flies and puts it out, by casting upon it the poem of Thulé. She forthwith reveals herself to him, transports him to her Temple, unfolds her Arts, and initiates him into her Mysteries; then announcing the death of Eusden the Poet Laureate, anoints him, carries him to Court, and proclaims him Successor.

The DUNCIAD, sic MS. It may be well disputed whether this be a right reading: Ought it not rather to be spelled Dunceiad, as the Etymology evidently demands? Dunce with an e, therefore Dunceiad with an e. That accurate and punctual Man of Letters, the Restorer of Shakespeare, constantly observes the preservation of this very Letter e, in spelling the Name of his beloved Author, and not like his common careless Editors, with the omission of one, nay sometimes of two ee's (as Shakspear, which is utterly unpardonable. “ Nor is the neglect of a Single Letter so trivial as to some it may appear; the alteration whereof in a learned language is an Atchievement that brings honour to the Critic who advances it; and Dr Bentley will be remembered to posterity for his performances of this sort, as long as the world shall have any esteem for the remains of Menander and Philemon. THEOBALD.

This is surely a slip in the learned author of the foregoing note; there having been since produced by an accurate Antiquary, an Autograph of Shakspeare himself, whereby it appears that he spelled his own name without the first e. And upon this authority it was, that those most Critical Curators of his

Monument in Westminster Abbey erased the former wrong reading, and restored the true spelling on a new piece of old Ægyptian Granite. Nor for this only do they deserve our thanks, but for exhibiting on the same Monument the first Specimen of an Edition of an author in Marble ; where (as may be seen on comparing the Tomb with the Book) in the space of five lines, two Words and a whole Verse are changed, and it is to be hoped will there stand, and outlast whatever hath been hitherto done in Paper ; as for the future, our learned Sister University (the other eye of England) is taking care to perpetuate a Total new Shakespear, at the Clarendon press. BENTL.

It is to be noted, that this great Critic also has omitted one circumstance ; which is, that the Inscription with the Name of Shakspeare was intended to be placed on the Marble Scroll to which he points with his hand ; instead of which it is now placed behind his back, and that Specimen of an Edition is put on the Scroll, which indeed Shakspeare hath great reason to point at. ANON.

Though I have as just a value for the letter E, as any Grammarian living, and the same affection for the Name of this Poem as any Critic for that of his Author ; yet it cannot induce me to agree with those who add yet another e to it, and call it the Dunceiade ; which being a French and foreign termination, is no way proper to a word entirely English, and vernacular. One e therefore in this case is right, and two e's wrong. Yet upon the whole, I shall follow the Manuscript, and print it without any e at all ; moved thereto by Authority (at all times, with Critics, equal, if not superior to Reason.) In which method of proceeding, I can never enough praise my good friend, the exact Mr Thomas Heaue ; who, if any word occur, which to him and all mankind is evidently wrong, yet keeps he it in the Text with due reverence, and only remarks in the Margin sic MS. In like manner, we shall not amend this error in the Title itself, but only note it obiter, to evince to the learned that it was not our fault, nor any effect of our ignorance or inattention. SCRIBL.

This poem was written in the year 1726. In the next year an imperfect Edition was published at Dublin, and reprinted at London in twelves ; another at Dublin, and another at London in Octavo ; and three others in twelves, the same year. But there was no perfect Edition before that of London in quarto ; which was attended with Notes. We are willing to acquaint Posterity, that this Poem was presented to King George the second and his Queen by the hands of Sir Robert Walpole, on the 12th of March, 1728—9. SCHOL. VET.

REMARKS.

It was expressly confessed in the Preface to the first edition, that this Poem was not published by the Author himself. It was printed originally in a foreign Country. And what foreign Country? Why, one notorious for blunders; where finding blanks only instead of proper names, these blunderers filled them up at their pleasure.

The very Hero of the Poem hath been mistaken to this hour; so that we are obliged to open our Notes with a discovery who he really was. We learn from a former Editor, that this piece was presented by the hands of Sir Robert Walpole to King George II. Now the author directly tells us, his hero is the Man ———who brings

The Smithfield Muses to the ear of Kings.

And it is notorious who was the person on whom this Prince conferred the honour of the Laurel.

It appears as plainly from the Apostrophe to the Great in the third verse, that Tibbald could not be the person, who was never an Author in fashion, or caressed by the Great; whereas this single characteristic is sufficient to point out the true Hero; who, above all other Poets of his time, was the Peculiar Delight and Chosen Companion of the Nobility of England; and wrote as he himself tells us, certain of his works at the earnest Desire of Persons of Quality.

Lastly, The sixth verse affords full proof; this Poet being the only one who was universally known to have had a Son so exactly like him, in his poetical, theatrical, political, and moral Capacities, that it could justly be said of him

Still Dunce the second reigns like Dunce the first. BENTL.

IMITATIONS.

VER. 6. Alluding to a verse of Mr Dryden, not in MacFleckno (as is said ignorantly in the Key to the Dunciad, p. 1.) but in his verses to Mr Congreve,

And Tom the second reigns like Tom the first.

Say, how the Goddess bade Britannia sleep,
And pour'd her Spirit o'er the land and deep.

REMARKS.

VER. 1. The mighty Mother, and her Son, &c.] The Reader ought here to be cautioned, that the Mother, and not the Son, is the principal Agent of this Poem: The latter of them is only chosen as her Colleague (as was anciently the custom in Rome before some great Expedition) the main action of the Poem being by no means the Coronation of the Laureate, which is performed in the very first book, but the Restoration of the Empire of Dulness in Britain, which is not accomplished till the last.

Ibid.—her Son who brings, &c.] Wonderful is the Stupidity of all the former Critics and Commentators on this work! It breaks forth at the very first line. The author of the Critique prefixed to Sawney, a Poem, p. 5. hath been so dull as to explain the Man who brings, &c. not of the hero of the piece, but of our Poet himself, as if he vaunted that Kings were to be his readers; an honour, which though this Poem hath had, yet knoweth he how to receive it with more modesty.

We remit this Ignorant to the first lines of the Æneid, assuring him that Virgil there speaketh not of himself, but of Æneas:

Arma virumque cano, Trojæ qui primus ab oris
Italiam, fato profugus, Lavinaque venit
Littora: multum ille et terris jactatus et alto, &c.

I cite the whole three verses, that I may by the way offer a Conjectural Emendation, purely my own, upon each: First, oris should be read aris, it being, as we see Æn. ii. 513. from the altar of Jupiter Herceus that Æneas fled as soon as he saw Priam slain. In the second line I would read flatu for fato, since it is most clear it was by Winds that he arrived at the shore of Italy. Jactatus, in the third, is surely as improperly applied to terris, as proper to alto; to say a man is toft on land, is much at one with saying he walks at sea: Risum teneatis, amici? Correct it, as I doubt not it ought to be vexatus. SCRIBL.

VER. 2. The Smithfield Muses] Smithfield is the place where Bartholomew Fair was kept, whose shews, machines, and dramatical entertainments, formerly agreeable only to the taste of the Rabble, were, by the Hero of this poem, and others of equal genius, brought to the Theatres of Covent-garden, Lincolns-inn-fields, and the Hay-market, to be the reigning plea-

VER. 4. By Dulness, Jove, and fate :] i. e. by their Judgments, their Interests, and their Inclinations.

VER. 7. Say how the Goddess, &c.] The Poet ventureth to sing the Action of the Goddess : but the Passion she impresseth on her illustrious Votaries, he thinketh can be only told by themselves. SCRIBL.

VER. 12. Daughter of Chaos, &c.] The beauty of this whole Allegory being purely of the poetical kind, we think it not our proper business, as a Scholiast, to meddle with it : But leave it (as we shall in general all such) to the reader ; remarking only that Chaos (according to Hesiod's Θεογονία) was the progenitor of all the Gods. SCRIBL.

VER. 15. Laborious, heavy, busy, bold, &c.] I wonder the learned Scriblerus has omitted to advertise the Reader, at the opening of this Poem, that Dulness here is not to be taken contractedly for mere Stupidity, but in the enlarged sense of the word, for all Slowness of Apprehension, Shortness of Sight, or imperfect Sense of things. It includes (as we see by the Poet's own words) Labour, Industry, and some degrees of Activity and Boldness : a ruling principle not inert, but turning topsy turvy the Understanding, and inducing an Anarchy or confused State of Mind. This remark ought to be carried along with the Reader throughout the work ; and without this caution he will be apt to mistake the importance of many of the Characters, as well as of the Design of the Poet. Hence it is, that some have complained he chuses too mean a subject, and imagined he employs himself, like Domitian, in killing flies ; whereas those who have the true key

Will see his Work, like Jacob's ladder, rise.

VER. 16. She rul'd, in native Anarchy, the mind.] The native Anarchy of the mind is that state which precedes the time of Reason's assuming the rule of the Passions. But in that state, the uncontrolled violence of the Passions would soon bring things to confusion, were it not for the intervention of DULNESS in this absence of Reason; who though she cannot regulate them like Reason, yet blunts and deadens their Vigour, and, indeed, produces some of the good effects of it: Hence it is that Dulness has often the appearance of Reason. This is the only good she ever did; and the candid Poet is careful to tell it in the very introduction of his Poem. It is to be observed indeed, that this is spoken of the universal rule of Dulness in ancient days, but we may form an idea of it from her partial Government in latter times.

VER. 17. Still her old Empire to restore] This Restoration makes the Completion of the Poem. Vide Book iv.

VER. 23. Or praise the Court, or magnify Mankind,] Ironicè, alluding to Gulliver's representations of both.—The next line relates to the papers of the Drapier against the currency of Wood's Copper-coin in Ireland, which, upon the great discontent of the people, his Majesty was graciously pleased to recal.

REMARKS.

VER. 26, Mourn not, my Swift ! at ought our realm acquires.] Ironice iterum. The Politics of England and Ireland were at this time by some thought to be opposite, or interfering with each other : Dr Swift, of course, was in the interest of the latter, our Author of the former.

VER. 28. To hatch a new Saturnian age of Lead.] The ancient Golden Age is by Poets styled Saturnian, as being under the reign of Saturn : but in the Chemical language Saturn is Lead. She is said here only to be spreading her wings to hatch this age ; which is not produced completely till the fourth book.

VER. 31. By his fam'd father's hand,] Mr Caius-Gabriel Cibber, father of the Poet-Laureate. The two Statues of the Lunatics over the gates of Bedlam hospital were done by him, and (as the son justly says of them) are no ill monuments of his fame as an Artist.

VER. 33. One Cell there is,] The cell of poor Poetry is here very properly represented as a little unindowed Hall in the neighbourhood of the Magnific College of Bedlam ; and as the surest Seminary to supply those learned walls with Professors. For there cannot be a plainer Symptom of Madness than for Men to chuse Poverty and Contempt ; to starve themselves and offend the public by scribbling,

Escape in Monsters, and amaze the Town, when they might have benefited themselves and others in profitable and honest employments. The Qualities and Productions of the Students of this private Academy are afterwards described in this first book ; as are also their Actions throughout the second; by which it appears, how near allied Dulness is to Madness. This naturally prepares us for the subject of the third book, where we find them in union, and acting in conjunction to produce the Catastrophe of the fourth; a mad poetical Sibyl leading our Hero through the Regions of Vision, to animate him in the present undertaking, by a view of the past triumphs of Barbarism over Science.

VER. 34 Poverty and Poetry.] I cannot here omit a remark that will greatly endear our Author to every one, who shall attentively observe that Humanity and Candour, which every where appears in him towards those unhappy objects of the ridicule of all mankind, the bad Poets. He here imputes all scandalous rhymes, scurrilous weekly-papers, base flatteries, wretched elegies, songs, and verses (even from those sung at Court to ballads in the streets) not so much to malice or servility as to Dulness; and not so much to Dulness as to Necessity. And thus, at the very commencement of his Satire, makes an apology for all that are to be satirized.

VER. 37, 38. *Hence Bards, like Proteus long in vain ty'd down,
 Escape in Monsters, and amaze the town.*]

Ovid has given us a very orderly account of these escapes,

Sunt, quibus in plures jus est transire figuras:

Ut tibi, complexi terram maris incola, Proteu;

Nunc violentus aper; nunc, quem tegisse timerent,

Anguis eras; modo te faciebant cornua Taurum:

Sæpe Lapis poteras.

MET. viii.

Neither Palæphatus, Phurnutus, nor Heraclides give us any steady light into the mythology of this mysterious fable. If I be not deceived in a part of learning which has so long exercised my pen, by Proteus must certainly be meant a hacknied Town-scribler; and by his Transformations, the various disguises such a one assumes, to elude the pursuit of his irreconcilable enemy, the Bailiff. And in this light, doubtless Horace understood the Fable, where, speaking of Proteus, he says,

Quum rapies in jus malis ridentem alienis,

Fiet aper, &c.

VER. 41. in the former lines,

Hence hymning Tyburn's elegiac Lay,

VER. 42. Alludes to the annual Songs composed to Music on St Cecilia's Feast.

REMARKS.

Proteus is represented as one bred of the mud and slime of Egypt, the original soil of Arts and Letters: And what is a Town-scribler, but a creature made up of the excrements of luxurious Science? By the change then into a Boar, is meant his character of a furious and dirty Party-writer; the Snake signifies a Libeller; and the Horns of the Bull, the Dilemma's of a Polemical Answerer. These are the three great parts he assumes; and when he has completed his circle, he sinks back again, as the last change into a Stone denotes, into his natural state of immoveable Stupidity. Hence it is, that the Poet, where speaking at large of all these various Metamorphoses in the second Book, describes Mother Osborne, the great Antitype of our Proteus, in ver. 312. after all her changes, as at last quite stupidified to Stone. If I may expect thanks of the learned world for this discovery, I would by no means deprive that excellent Critic of his share who discovered before me, that in the character of Proteus was designed Sophistam, Magum, Politicum, præsertim rebus omnibus sese accommodantem. Which in English is, A political Writer, a Libeller, and a Disputer, writing indifferently for or against every party in the State, every sect in Religion, and every character in private life. See my Fables of Ovid explained.

VER. 104. And Eusden eke out, &c.] Laurence Eusden Poet laureate. Mr Jacob gives a catalogue of some few only of his works, which were very numerous. Mr Cook, in his Battle of Poets, saith of him,

Eusden, a laurel'd Bard, by fortune rais'd,
By very few was read, by fewer prais'd.

Mr Oldmixon, in his Arts of Logic and Rhetoric, p. 413, 414. affirms, "That of all the Galimatias he ever met with, none comes up to some verses of this poet, which have as much of the Ridiculum and the Fustian in them as can well be jumbled together, and are of that sort of nonsense, which so perfectly confounds all Ideas, that there is no distinct one left in the mind." Farther he says of him, "That he hath prophesied his own poetry shall be sweeter than Catullus, Ovid and Tibullus; but we have little hope of the accomplishment of it, from what he hath lately published." Upon which Mr Oldmixon has not spared a reflection, "That the putting the Laurel on the head of one who writ such verses, will give futurity a very lively idea of the judgment and justice of those who bestowed it." Ibid p. 417. But the well-known learning of that Noble Person, who was then Lord Chamberlain, might have screened him from this unmannerly reflection. Nor ought Mr Oldmixon to complain, so long after, that the laurel would have better become his own brows, or any others: It were more decent to acquiesce in the opinion of the Duke of Buckingham upon this matter:

Var. Tibbald.] Author of a pamphlet intitled, Shakespear Restored. During two whole years, while Mr Pope was preparing his edition of Shakespear, he published Advertisements, requesting assistance, and promising satisfaction to any who could contribute to its greater perfection. But this restorer, who was at that time soliciting favours of him by Letters, did wholly conceal his design, till after its publication : (which he was since not ashamed to own, in a Daily Journal of Nov. 26, 1728.) And then an outcry was made in the prints, that our Author had joined with the Bookseller to raise an extravagant subscription ; in which he had no share, of which he had now knowledge, and against which he had publickly advertised in his own proposals for Homer. Probably that proceeding elevated Tibbald to the dignity he holds in this Poem, which he seems to deserve no other way better than his brethren ; unless we impute it to the share he had in the Journals, cited among the Testimonies of Authors prefixed to this work.

The same plea might also serve for his Successor, Mr Cibber ; and is further strengthened in the following Epigram made on that occasion :

In merry old England it once was a rule,
The King had his Poet, and also his Fool :
But now we're so frugal, I'd have you to know it,
That Cibber can serve both for Fool and for Poet.

REMARKS.

Nahum Tait was Poet Laureate, a cold Writer, of no Invention; but sometimes translated tolerably when befriended by Mr Dryden. In his second Part of Absalom and Achitophel are above two hundred admirable lines together of that great hand, which strongly shine through the insipidity of the rest. Something parallel may be observed of another author here mentioned.

VER. 106. And all the mighty Mad] this is by no means to be understood literally, as if Mr Dennis were really mad, according to the Narrative of Dr Norris in Swift and Pope's Miscellanies, vol. iii. No—it is spoken of that excellent and divine Madness, so often mentioned by Plato; that poetical rage and enthusiasm, with which Mr D. hath, in his time, been highly possessed; and of those extraordinary hints and motions whereof he himself so feelingly treats in his preface to the Rem. on Pr. Arth. [See notes on Book ii. ver. 268.]

Ibid. And all the mighty Mad in Dennis rage.] Mr Theobald, in the Censor, vol. ii. N. 32. calls Mr Dennis by the name of Furius. “The modern Furius is to be looked upon as more an “ object of pity, than of that which he daily provokes, laugh“ ter and contempt. Did we really know how much this poor “ man” [I wish that reflection on poverty had been spared] “ suf“ fers by being contradicted, or, which is the same thing in “ effect, by hearing another praised; we should, in compassion, “ sometimes attend to him with a silent nod, and let him go “ away with the triumphs of his ill-nature.—Poor Furius [a- “ gain] when any of his contemporaries are spoken well of, quit“ ting the ground of the present dispute, steps back a thousand “ years, to call in the succour of the ancients. His very pane“ gyric is spiteful, and he uses it for the same reason as some “ Ladies do their commendations of a dead beauty, who would “ never have had their good word, but that a living one hap“ pened to be mentioned in their company. His applause is not
“ the tribute of his Heart, but the sacrifice of his Revenge.” &c.
Indeed his pieces against our poet are somewhat of an angry character, and as they are now scarce extant, a taste of his style may be satisfactory to the curious. “A young, squab, short “ gentleman, whose outward form, though it should be that of “ downright monkey, would not differ so much from human

 Essay on Criticism, p. 26. 29, 30.

It would be unjust not to add his reasons for this Fury, they are so strong and so coercive. “ I regard him (saith he) as an “ Enemy, not so much to me, as to my King, to my Country, “ to my religion, and to that liberty which has been the sole “ felicity of my life. A vagary of Fortune, who is sometimes “ pleased to be frolicksome, and the epidemic Madness of the

 “ I look on it as my duty to King George, whose faithful Sub“ ject I am ; to my Country, of which I have appeared a con“ stant lover ; to the Laws, under whose protection I have so “ long lived ; and to the Liberty of my Country, more dear to “ me than life, of which I have now for forty years been a “ constant assertor, &c. I look upon it as my Duty, I say,
 “ to do—you shall see what—to pull the Lion’s skin from this “ little Ass, which popular error has thrown round him ; and “ to show that this Author, who has been lately so much in “ vogue, has neither sense in his thoughts, nor English
 “ in his expressions.” DENNIS, Rem. on Hom. Pref. p. 2.
 91, &c.

Besides these public-spirited reasons, Mr D. had a private one ; which, by his manner of expressing it in p. 92. appears to have been equally strong. He was even in bodily fear of his life from the machinations of the said Mr P. “ The story (says he) is too “ long to be told, but who would be acquainted with it, may “ hear it from Mr Curll, my Bookseller.—However, what my “ reason has suggested to me, that I have with a just confidence “ said, in defiance of his two clandestine weapons, his Slander
 “ and his Poison.” Which last words of this book plainly discover Mr D.’s suspicion was that of being poisoned, in like manner as Mr Curll had been before him: of which fact see A full and true account of a horrid and barbarous revenge, by poison, on the body of Edmund Curll, printed in 1716, the year antecedent to that wherein these Remarks of Mr Dennis were published. But what puts it beyond all question is a passage in a very warm treatise, in which Mr D. was also concerned, price two pence, called A true character of Mr Pope and his writings, printed for S. Popping, 1716; in the tenth page whereof he is said "to have insulted people on those calamities and diseases which he himself gave them, by administering Poison to them:" and is called (p. 4.) "a lurking way-laying coward, and a stabber in the dark." Which (with many other things most lively set forth in that piece) must have rendered him a terror, not to Mr Dennis only, but to all christian people. This charitable warning only provoked our incorrigible Poet to write the following Epigram.

Should Dennis publish, you had stabb'd your Brother,
Lampoon'd your Monarch, or debauch'd your Mother;
Say, what revenge on Dennis can be had?
Too dull for laughter, for reply too mad:
On one so poor you cannot take the law;
On one so old your sword you scorn to draw:
Uncag'd then let the harmless monster rage,
Secure in dulness, madness, want, and age.

For the rest; Mr John Dennis was the Son of a Sadler in London, born 1657. He paid court to Mr Dryden: and having obtained some correspondence with Mr Wycherley and Mr Congreve, he immediately obliged the public with their Letters. He made himself known to the Government by many admirable schemes and projects; which the Ministry, for reasons best known to themselves, constantly kept private. For his character, as a writer, it is given us as follows: "Mr Dennis is excellent at Pindaric writings, perfectly regular in all his performances, and a person of sound Learning. That he is master of a great deal of Penetration and Judgment, his criticisms (particularly on Prince Arthur) do sufficiently demonstrate." From the same account it also appears that he writ Plays "more to get Reputation than Money." DENNIS of himself. See Giles Jacob's Lives of Dram. Poets, p. 68, 69, compared with p. 286.

VOL. III.

Swearing and supperless the Hero fate, 115
 Blasphem'd his Gods, the Dice, and damn'd his Fate.

REMARKS.

VER. 109. Bays, form'd by nature, &c.] It is hoped the poet here hath done full justice to his Hero's character, which it were a great mistake to imagine was wholly sunk in stupidity: he is allowed to have supported it with a wonderful mixture of Vivacity. This character is heightened according to his own desire, in a Letter he wrote to our author. "Pert and dull at least
 " you might have allowed me. What! am I only to be dull,
 " and dull still, and again, and forever!" He then solemnly appealed to his own conscience, that "he could not think him" self so, nor believe that our poet did; but that he spoke
 " worse of him than he could possibly think; and concluded it " must be merely to shew his Wit, or for some Profit or Lucre
 " to himself" Life of C. C. chap. vii. and Letter to Mr P. page 15. 40. 53. And to shew his claim to what the poet was so unwilling to allow him, of being Pert as well as dull, he declares he will have the last word; which occasioned the following Epigram:

Quoth Cibber to Pope, Tho' in Verse you foreclose,
 I'll have the last word; for by G—, I'll write prose,
 Poor Colly, thy Reas'ning is none of the strongest,
 For know, the last Word is the Word that lasts longest.

VER. 112. Remembring she herself was Pertness once.] The Poet had told us, ver. 13. that this fair daughter of Night and Chaos was got by them in their dotage; a time of life when parents are most apt to spoil their children by too great indulgence. It is not to be thought strange therefore, that over-much caressing should make even Dulness herself pert, especially in her youth; though her own natural Alacrity was in sinking, or towards Gravity.

SCRIBL.

VER. 113. shame to Fortune!] Because she usually shews favour to persons of this Character, who have a threefold pretence to it.

VER. 115. supperless the Hero fate,] It is amazing how the sense of this hath been mistaken by all the former commentators, who most idly suppose it to imply that the Hero of the poem wanted a supper. In truth a great absurdity! Not that we are ignorant that the hero of Homer's Odyssey is frequently in that circumstance, and therefore it can no way derogate from the grandeur of an Epic Poem to represent such Hero under a calamity, to which the greatest, not only of Critics and Poets, but of Kings and Warriors, have been subject. But much more refined, I will venture to say, is the meaning of our author : It was to give us obliquely a curious precept, or, what Boswell calls, a disguised sentence, that "Temperance is the life of Study." The language of poetry brings all into action ; and to represent a Critic encompassed with books but without a supper, is a picture which lively expresseth how much the true Critic prefers the diet of the mind to that of the body, one of which he always castigates, and often totally neglects for the greater improvement of the other.

Then gnaw'd his Pen, then dash'd it on the ground,

SCRIBL.

 Here lay poor Fletcher's half-eat scenes, and here
 The Frippery of crucify'd Moliere;
 There hapless Shakespear, yet of Tibbald sore,
 Wish'd he had blotted for himself before.

REMARKS.

But since the discovery of the true Hero of the poem, may we not add, that nothing was so natural, after so great a loss of Money at dice, or of Reputation by his Play, as that the Poet should have no great stomach to eat a supper? Besides, how well has the Poet consulted his Heroic Character, in adding that he swore all the time. BENTL.

VER. 131. poor Fletcher's half-eat scenes] A great number of them taken out to patch up his Plays.

VER. 132. The Frippery] "When I fitted up an old play, it was a good housewife will mend old linen, when she has not better employment." Life, p. 217. Octavo.

VER. 133. hapless Shakespear, &c] It is not to be doubted but Bays was a subscriber to Tibbald's Shakespear. He was frequently liberal this way; and, as he tells us, "subscribed to Mr Pope's Homer, out of pure Generosity and Civility; but when Mr Pope did so to his Nonjuror, he concluded it could be no thing but a joke." Letter to Mr P. p. 24.

This Tibbald, or Theobald, published an edition of Shakespear, of which he was so proud himself as to say, in one of Mist's Journals, June 8, "That to expose any Errors in it was impracticable." And in another, April 27, "That whatever care might for the future be taken by any other Editor, he would still give above five hundred Emendations, that shall escape them all."

The rest on Out-side merit but presume, 135
 Or serve (like other Fools) to fill a room;

 There stamp'd with arms, Newcastle shines complete:

REMARKS.

VER. 134. Wish'd he had blotted] It was a ridiculous praise which the Players gave to Shakespear, "that he never blotted a line." Ben Johnson honestly wish'd he had blotted a thousand: and Shakespear would certainly have wish'd the same, if he had lived to see those alterations in his works, which not the Actors only (and especially the daring Hero of this Poem) have made on the Stage, but the presumptuous Critics of our days in their Editions.

VER. 135. The rest on Out-side merit, &c.] This Library is divided into three parts: the first consists of those authors from whom he stole, and whose works he mangled; the second of such as fitted the shelves, or were gilded for shew, or adorned with pictures; the third class our author calls solid learning, old bodies of Divinity, old Commentaries, old English Printers, or old English Translations: all very voluminous, and fit to erect altars to Dulness.

VER. 141. Ogilby the great;] "John Ogilby was one, who from a late initiation into literature, made such a progress as might well style him the prodigy of his time! sending into the world so many large Volumes! The Marshalsea and Newgate were no strangers to him.” WINSTANLY. Quarles was as dull a writer, but an honest man. Blome's books are remarkable for their cuts.

REMARKS.

VER. 146. worthy Settle, Banks, and Broome.] The poet has mentioned these three authors in particular, as they are parallel to our Hero in his three capacities: 1. Settle was his Brother Laureate; only indeed upon half-pay, for the City instead of the Court; but equally famous for unintelligible flights in his poems on publick occasions, such as shows, Birth-days, &c. 2. Banks was his rival in Tragedy (tho' more successful) in one of his Tragedies, the Earl of Essex, which is yet alive: Anna Boleyn, the Queen of Scots, and Cyrus the Great, are dead and gone. These he dress'd in a sort of Beggars Velvet, or a happy mixture of the thick Fustian and thin Prosaic; exactly imitated in Perolla and Isidora, Cæsar in Ægypt and the Heroic Daughter. 3. E'er since Sir Fopling's Periwig was Praise,
 To the last honours of the Butt and Bays :
 O thou ! of Bus'ness the directing soul !
 To this our head like bials to the bowl, 170
 Which as more pond'rous, made its aim more true,
 Obliquely wadling to the mark in view :
 O ! ever gracious to perplex'd mankind,
 Still spread a healing mist before the mind !
 And, lest we err by Wit's wild dancing light, 175
 Secure us kindly in our native night.
 Or, if to Wit a coxcomb make pretence,
 Guard the sure barrier between that and Sense ;

 Ah ! still o'er Britain stretch that peaceful wand,
 Which lulls th' Helvetian and Batavian land :
 Where rebel to thy throne if Science rise,
 She does but shew her coward face and dies :
 There thy good Scholiasts with unweary'd pains
 Make Horace flat, and humble Maro's strains :
 Here studious I unlucky moderns save,
 Nor sleeps one error in its father's grave,
 Old puns restore, lost blunders nicely seek,
 And crucify poor Shakespear once a week.

Nay, so far had he lost his reverence to this incomparable author, as to say in print, He deserv'd to be whipt. An Insolence which nothing sure can parallel ! but that of Dennis, who can be proved to have declared before company, that Shakespear was a Rascal. O tempora ! O mores ! SCRIBL.

Upon these somebody made this Epigram :

This learned Critic is to be understood allegorically: The DOCTORS in this place mean no more than false Dice, a Cant phrase used among Gamsters. So the meaning of these four sonorous lines is only this, "Shall I play fair or foul?"

VER. 208. Ridpath—Mist.] George Ridpath, author of a Whig-paper, called the Flying post; Nathanael Mist, of a famous Tory Journal.

VER. 211. Or rob Rome's ancient geese of all their glories,] Relates to the well known story of the geese that saved the Capitol; of which Virgil, Æn. viii.

Atque hic auratis volitans argenteus anser

Porticibus, Gallos in limine adesse canebat.

A passage I have always suspected. Who sees not the antithesis of auratis and argenteus to be unworthy the Virgilian majesty? And what absurdity to say a goose sings? canebat. Virgil gives a contrary character of the voice of this silly bird, in Eccl. ix.

—argutos interstrepere anser olores.

Read it therefore, adesse strepebat. And why auratis porticibus? does not the very verse preceeding this inform us, Romuleoque recens horrebat regia culmo.

Is this thatch in one line, and gold in another, consistent? I scruple not (repugnantibus omnibus manuscriptis) to correct it auritis. Horace uses the same epithet in the same sense,

—Auritas fidibus canoris

Ducere quercus.

And to say that walls have ears, is common even to a proverb.

VER. 213. Hold—to the Minister—] In the former Edition,
 Yes to my Country I my pen consign,
 Yes, from this moment, mighty Mist ! am thine.

REMARKS.

VER. 212. And cackling save the Monarchy of Tories ?] Not out of any preference or affection to the Tories. For what Hobbes so ingenuously confesses of himself, is true of all Ministerial writers whatsoever : “ That he defends the supreme powers, as the Geese by their cackling defended the Romans, who held the Capitol ; for they favoured them no more than the Gauls, their Enemies, but were as ready to have defended the Gauls, if they had been possessed of the Capitol ” Epist. Ded. to the Leviathan.

VER. 215 Gazetteers] A band of ministerial writers, hired at the price mentioned in the note on book ii. ver. 316. who, on the very day their patron quitted his post, laid down their paper, and declared they would never more meddle in Politics.

VER. 218. Cibberian forehead] So indeed all the MSS. read, but I make no scruple to pronounce them all wrong, the Laureate being elsewhere celebrated by our Poet for his great Modesty—modest Cibber—Read, therefore, at my peril, Cerberian forehead. This is perfectly classical, and what is more Homerical ; the Dog was the ancient, as the Bitch is the modern, symbol of Impudence : (κυνὸς ὀμματα ἔχων, says Achilles to Agamemnon) which, when in a superlative degree, may well be denominated Cerberus, the Dog with three heads.—But as to the latter part of this verse, Cibberian brain, that is certainly the genuine reading. VER. 256. When the last blaze sent Ilion to the skies.] See Virgil Æn. ii. where I would advise the Reader to peruse the story of Troy's destruction, rather than in Wypkyn. But I caution him alike in both to beware of a most grievous error, that of thinking it was brought about by I know not what Trojan Horse; there having never been any such thing. For, first, it was not Trojan, being made by the Greeks; and, secondly, it was not a horse, but a mare. This is clear from many verses in Virgil :

——Uterumque armato milite complent.——

Inclusos utero Danaos ——

VER. 328. — Ogilby)— God save king Log!] See Ogilby's Æsop's Fables, where, in the story of the Frogs and their King, this excellent hemistich is to be found.

Our author manifests here, and elsewhere, a prodigious tenderness for the bad writers. We see he selects the only good passage, perhaps, in all that ever Ogilby writ; which shews how candid and patient a reader he must have been. What can be more kind and affectionate than these words in the preface to his Poems, where he labours to call up all our humanity and forgiveness toward these unlucky men, by the most moderate representation of their case that has ever been given by any author?

“ Much may be said to extenuate the fault of bad poets: What “ we call a genius is hard to be distinguished, by a man himself, “ from a prevalent inclination: And if it be never so great, he “ can at first discover it no other way than by that strong pro“ pensity which renders him the more liable to be mistaken. He “ has no other method but to make the experiment, by writing,
 “ and so appealing to the judgment of others: And if he happens “ to write ill (which is certainly no sin in itself) he is immediate“ ly made the object of ridicule! I wish we had the humanity to “ reflect, that even the worst authors might endeavour to please “ us, and, in that endeavour, deserve something at our hands.
 “ We have no cause to quarrel with them, but for their obstinacy
 “ in persisting, and even that may admit of alleviating circum“ stances: For their particular friends may be either ignorant,

“ or unsincere ; and the rest of the world too well bred to shock “ them with a truth which generally their booksellers are the first “ that inform them of.”

But how much all indulgence is lost upon these people, may appear from the just reflection made on their constant conduct and constant fate, in the following Epigram :

“ Ye little Wits, that gleam’d a while,
“ When Pope vouchaf’d a ray,
“ Alas, depriv’d of his kind smile,
“ How soon ye fade away !

“ To compass Phœbus’ car about,
“ Thus empty vapours rise ;
“ Each lends his cloud, to put him out,
“ That rear’d him to the skies.

BOOK the SECOND.

A R G U M E N T.

The King being proclaimed, the solemnity is graced with public Games and sports of various kinds; not instituted by the Hero, as by Æneas in Virgil, but for greater honour by the Goddess in person (in like manner as the games Pythia, Isthmia, &c. were anciently said to be ordained by the Gods, and as Thetis herself appearing, according to Homer, Odyss. xxiv. proposed the prizes in honour of her son Achilles.) Hither flock the Poets and Critics attended, as is but just, with their Patrons and Booksellers. The Goddess is first pleased, for her disport, to propose games to the Booksellers, and setteth up the Phantom of a Poet, which they contend to overtake. The Races described, with their divers accidents. Next the game for a Poetess. Then follow the Exercises for the Poets of tickling, vociferating, diving:

The first holds forth the arts and practices of Dedicators, the second of Disputants and fustian Poets, the third of profound, dark, and dirty Party-writers. Lastly, for the Critics, the Goddess proposes (with great propriety) an Exercise not of their parts, but their patience in hearing the works of two voluminous Authors, one in verse, and the other in prose, deliberately read, without sleeping: The various effects of which, with the several degrees and manners of their operation, are here set forth; till the whole number, not of Critics only, but of spectators, actors, and all present, fall fast asleep; which naturally and necessarily ends the games.

*And now to this side, now to that they nod.
As Verse or Prose infuse the drowsy God.*

HIGH on a gorgeous seat, that far outshone,
 Henley's gilt tub, or Fleckno's Irish throne,

R E M A R K S.

TWO things there are, upon the supposition of which the very basis of all verbal criticism is founded and supported: The first, that an Author could never fail to use the best word on every occasion; the second, that a Critic cannot chuse but know which that is. This being granted, whenever any word doth not fully content us, we take upon us to conclude, first, that the author could never have used it; and, secondly, that he must have used that very one, which we conjecture in its stead.

We cannot, therefore, enough admire the learned Scriblerus for his alteration of the text in the two last verses of the preceding book, which in all the former editions stood thus:

Hoarse thunder to its bottom shook the bog,

And the loud nation croak'd, God save king Log.

He has, with great judgment, transposed these two epithets; putting hoarse to the nation, and loud to the thunder: And this being evidently the true reading, he vouchsafed not so much as to mention the former; for which assertion of the just right of a Critic, he merits the acknowledgment of all sound Commentators.

VER. 2. Henley's gilt tub,] The pulpit of a Dissenter is usually called a tub; but that of Mr Orator Henley was covered with velvet, and adorned with gold. He had also a fair altar, and over it is this extraordinary inscription, The primitive Eucharist. See the history of this person, book iii.

REMARKS.

Ver. 2. or Fleckno's Irish throne,] Richard Fleckno was an Irish priest, but had laid aside (as himself expressed it) the mechanic part of priesthood. He printed some plays, poems, letters, and travels. I doubt not, our author took occasion to mention him in respect to the Poem of Mr Dryden, to which this bears some resemblance, though of a character more different from it than that of the Æneid from the Iliad, or the Lutrin of Boileau from the Defait de Bouts rimées of Sarazin.

It may be just worth mentioning, that the Eminence from whence the ancient Sophists entertained their auditors, was called by the pompous name of a Throne;—ἐπὶ θρόνῳ τινὸς ὑψηλῷ μαλα σοφιστικῶς ἔσβαρῶς. Themistius, Orat i.

VER. 3. Or that where on her Curls the public pours,] Edmund Curl stood in the pillory at Charing-cross, in March 1727-8. "This (saith Edmund Curl) is a false Assertion—I had indeed the corporal punishment of what the Gentlemen of the long Robe are pleased jocosely to call mounting the Rostrum for one hour: but that scene of action was not in the month of March, but in February." [Curliad, 12mo p. 19.] And of the History of his being tost in a Blanket, he saith, Here, "Scriblerus! thou leeseest in what thou assertest concerning the blanket; it was not a blanket, but a rug." p. 25. Much in the same manner Mr Cibber remonstrated, that his Brothers, at Bedlam, mentioned Book i. were not Brazen, but Blocks; yet our author let it pass unaltered, as a trifle that no way altered the relationship.

We should think (gentle Reader) that we but ill performed our part, if we corrected not as well our own errors now, as formerly those of the Printer. Since what moved us to this Work, was solely the love of Truth, not in the least any Vain glory, or Desire to contend with Great Authors. And further, our Mistakes, we conceive, will the rather be pardoned, as scarce possible to be avoided in writing of such Persons and Works as do ever shun the Light. However, that we may not any way soften or extenuate the same, we give them thee in the very words of our Antagonists: not defending, but retracting them from our heart, and craving excuse of the Parties offended: For surely in this Work, it hath been above all things our desire, to provoke no Man.

REMARKS.

VER. 15. Rome in her Capitol saw Querno sit,] Camillo Querno was of Apulia, who hearing the great Encouragement which Leo X. gave to poets, travelled to Rome with a harp in his hand, and sung to it twenty thousand verses of a poem called Alexias. He was introduced as a Buffoon to Leo, and promoted to the honour of the Laurel; a jest which the court of Rome and the Pope himself entered into so far, as to cause him ride on an elephant to the Capitol, and to hold a solemn festival on his coronation; at which it is recorded the Poet himself was so transported as to weep for joy *. He was ever after a constant frequenter of the Pope's table, drank abundantly, and poured forth verses without number. PAULUS JOVIUS, Elog. Vir. doct. cap. lxxxii. Some idea of his poetry is given by Fam. Strada, in his Prolusions.

The reader will observe how exactly some of these verses suit with their allegorical application here to a plagiarist: There seems to me a great propriety in this Episode, where such an one is imaged by a phantom that deludes the grasp of the expecting Bookseller.

 Twelve starv'ling bards of these degen'rate days: 40

was like that of a man I have heard of, who, as he was sitting in company, perceived his next neighbour had stolen his handkerchief. "Sir, (said the thief, finding himself detected) do not expose me, I did it for mere want; be so good but to take it privately out of my pocket again, and say nothing." The honest man did so, but the other cry'd out, "See, gentlemen what a thief we have among us! look, he is stealing my handkerchief!"

Some time before, he had borrow'd of Dr Arbuthnot a paper called an Historico-physical account of the South-Sea; and of Mr Pope the Memoirs of a Parish Clerk, which for two years he kept and read to the Rev. Dr Young,——F. Billers, Esq; and many others, as his own. Being applied to for them, he pretended they were lost; but there happening to be another copy of the latter, it came out in Swift and Pope's Miscellanies. Upon this, it seems, he was so far mistaken as to confess his proceeding, by an endeavour to hide it; unguardedly printing (in the Daily Journal of April 3. 1728.) "That the contempt which he and others had for those pieces (which only himself had shewn, and handed about as his own) occasioned their being lost, and for that cause only not returned." A fact, of which, as none but he could be conscious, none but he could be the publisher of it. The plagiarisms of this person gave occasion to the following Epigram:

"More always smiles whenever he recites;

"He smiles (you think) approving what he writes.

"And yet in this no vanity is shown;

"A modest man may like what's not his own.

This young Gentleman's whole misfortune was too inordinate a passion to be thought a Wit. Here is a very strong instance attested by Mr Savage, son of the late Earl Rivers; who having shown some verses of his in manuscript to Mr Moore, wherein Mr Pope was called first of the tuneful train, Mr Moore the next morning sent to Mr Savage to desire him to give those verses another turn, to wit, "That Pope might now be the first, because Moore had left him unrivall'd in turning his stile to Comedy." This was during the rehearsal of the Rival Modes, his first and only work; the Town condemn'd it in the action, but he printed it in 1726-7, with this modest Motto, Hic cæstus, artemque repono.

But lofty Lintot in the circle rose :

“ This prize is mine ; who tempt it are my foes ;

“ With me began this genius, and shall end.” 55

He spoke : and who with Lintot shall contend ?

Fear held them mute. Alone, untaught to fear,

R E M A R K S.

The smaller pieces which we have heard attributed to this author, are, An Epigram on the Bridge at Blenheim, by Dr Evans : Cosmelia, by Mr Pit, Mr Jones, &c. The Mock-marriage of a mad Divine, with a Cl. for a Parson, by Dr W. The Saw-pit a Simile by a Friend. Certain Physical works on Sir James Baker ; and some unown'd Letters, Advertisements, and Epigrams against our author in the Daily Journal.

Notwithstanding what is here collected of the Person imagin'd by Curl to be meant in this place, we cannot be of that opinion ; since our Poet had certainly no need of vindicating half a dozen verses to himself, which every reader had done for him ; since the name itself is not spelled Moore, but More ; and lastly, since the learned Scriblerus has so well proved the contrary.

VER. 50. the phantom More.] It appears from hence, that this is not the name of a real person, but fictitious. More from μῶρος, stultus, μωρία, stultia, to represent the folly of a plagiarist. Thus Erasmus, Admonuit me Mori cognomen tibi, quod tam ad Moriae vocabulum accedit quam es ipse a re alienus. Dedication of Moriae Encomium to Sir Thomas More, the farewell of which may be our author's to his plagiarist, Vale, More ! et moriam tuam gnaviter defende. Adieu, More ! and be sure strongly to defend thy own folly. SCRIBL.

VER. 53. But lofty Lintot] We enter here upon the episode of the Booksellers : Persons, whose names being more known and famous in the learned world than those of the Authors in this poem, do therefore need less explanation. The action of Mr Lintot here imitates that of Dares in Virgil, rising just in this manner to lay hold on a Bull. This eminent Bookseller printed the Rival Modes before mentioned.

VER. 58. Stood dauntless Curl ;] We come now to a character of much respect, that of Mr Edmund Curl. As a plain repetition of great actions is the best praise of them, we shall

He possessed himself of a command over all authors whatever ; he caused them to write what he pleased ; they could not call their very Names their own. He was not only famous among these ; he was taken notice of by the State, the Church, and the Law, and received particular marks of distinction from each

It will be owned that he is here introduced with all possible dignity : He speaks like the intrepid Diomed ; he runs like the swift-footed Achilles ; if he falls, 'tis like the beloved Nisus ; and (what Homer makes to be the chief of all praises) he is favoured of the Gods ; he says but three words, and his prayer is heard ; a Goddess conveys it to the seat of Jupiter : Though he loses the prize, he gains the victory ; the great mother herself comforts him, she inspires him with expedients, she honours him with an immortal present (such as Achilles receives from Thetis, and Æneas from Venus) at once instructive and prophetic : After this he is unrivalled and triumphant.

The tribute our author here pays him is a grateful return for several unmerited obligations : many weighty animadversions on the public affairs, and many excellent and diverting pieces on private persons, has he given to his name. If ever he owed two verses to any other, he owed Mr Curl some thousands. He was every day extending his fame, and enlarging his Writings : Witness innumerable instances ; but it shall suffice only to mention learned very well know it to be but a copy of Homer and Virgil; the very words ὄνθος, and finus, are used by them, though our poet (in compliance to modern nicety) has remarkably enriched and coloured his language, as well as raised the versification, in this Episode, and in the following one of Eliza. Mr Dryden, in Mac-Fleckno, has not scrupled to mention the Morning Toast at which the fishes bite in the Thames, Pissing Alley, Relicts of the Bum, &c. but our author is more grave, and (as a fine writer says of Virgil in his Georgics) tosses about his Dung with an air of Majesty. If we consider that the exercises of his Authors could with justice be no higher than tickling, chattering, braying, or diving, it was no easy matter to invent such games as were proportioned to the meaner degree of Booksellers. In Homer and Virgil, Ajax and Nisus, the persons drawn in this plight, are Heroes; whereas here they are such with whom it had been great impropriety to have joined any but vile ideas; besides the natural connection there is between Libellers and common Nusances. Nevertheless I have heard our Author own, that this part of his Poem was, as (it frequently happens) what cost him most trouble and pleased him least: but that he hoped it was excusable, since levelled at such as understood no delicate satire: Thus the politest men are sometimes obliged to swear, when they happen to have to do with porters and oyster-wenches.

To me this instance seems unluckily chosen; if it be a satire on any body, it must be on a bad paymaster, since the person to whom they have here applied it, was a man of fortune. Not but poets may well be jealous of so great a prerogative as non-payment; which Mr Dennis so far asserts, as boldly to pronounce, that "if Homer himself was not in debt, it was because nobody would trust him." REMARKS.

VER. 124. like Congreve, Addison, and Prior;] These authors being such whose names will reach posterity, we shall not give any account of them, but proceed to those of whom it is necessary.—Bezaleel Morris was author of some satires on the translators of Homer, with many other things printed in newspapers.—“Bond writ a satire against Mr P.—Capt. Breval was author of the confederates, an ingenious dramatic performance to expose Mr P. Mr Gay, Dr Arb. and some ladies of quality,” says CURL, Key, p. 11.

VER. 125. Mears, Warner, Wilkins] Booksellers and Printers of much anonymous stuff

VER. 126. Breval, Bond, Bezaleel,] I foresee it will be objected from this line, that we were in an error in our assertion on ver. 50. of this book, that More was a fictitious name, since those persons are equally represented by the poet as phantoms. So at first sight it may seem; but be not deceived, reader; these also are not real persons. 'Tis true, Curl declares Breval, a captain, author of a piece called the Confederates; but the said Curl first said it was written by Joseph Gay; is his second assertion to be credited any more than his first? He likewise affirms Bond to one who write a satire on our poet: But where is such a satire to be found; where was such a writer ever heard of? As for Bezaleel, it carries forgery in the very name; nor is it, as the others are, a surname. Thou may'st depend upon it, no such authors ever lived; all phantoms. SCRIBL.

 So shall each hostile name become our own,
 And we too boast our Garth and Addison. 140

REMARKS.

VER. 132. And turn this whole illusion on the town :] It was a common practice of this bookseller to publish vile pieces of obscure hands under the names of eminent authors.

Ver. 137.—this magic gift ;] In verity (saith Scriblerus) a very bungling trick. How much better might our worthy Brethren of Grubstreet be taught (as in many things they have already been) by the modern masters of Polemics ? who when they make free with their neighbours, seize upon their good works rather than their good name : as knowing that those will produce a name of their own.

VER. 138. Cook shall be Prior,] The man here specified writ a thing called the Battle of Poets, in which Philips and Warton were the Heroes, and Swift and Pope utterly routed. He also published some malevolent things in the British, London, and Daily Journals ; and at the same time wrote letters to Mr Pope, protesting his Innocence. His chief work was a translation of Hesiod, to which Theobald writ notes and half notes, which he carefully owned.

Ibid. and Concanen, Swift :] In the first edition of this poem there were only asterisks in this place, but the names were since inserted, merely to fill up the verse, and give ease to the ear of the reader.

VER. 140. And we too boast our Garth and Addison.] Nothing is more remarkable than our author's love of praising good writers. He has in this very poem celebrated Mr Locke, Sir Isaac Newton, Dr Barrow, Dr Atterbury, Mr Dryden, Mr Congreve, Dr Garth, Mr Addison ; in a word, almost every man of his time that deserved it ; even Cibber himself (presuming him to be the author of the Careless Husband.) It was very difficult to have that pleasure in a poem on this subject, yet he has found means to insert their panegyric, and has made even Dulness out of her own mouth pronounce it. It must have been particularly agreeable to him to celebrate Dr Garth, both as his constant friend, and as he was his predecessor in this kind of satire. The Dispensary attacked the whole body of Apothecaries, a much more useful one undoubtedly than that of the bad Poets; if in truth this can be a body, of which no two members ever agreed. It also did, what Mr Theobald says is unpardonable, drew in parts of private character, and introduced persons independent of his subject. Much more would Boileau have incurred his censure, who left all subjects whatever, on all occasions, to fall upon the bad poets (which, it is to be feared, would have been more immediately his concern.) But certainly, next to commending good writers, the greatest service to learning is to expose the bad, who can only that way be made of any use to it. This truth is very well set forth in these lines addressed to our author.

“ The craven Rook, and pert Jackdaw,
“ (Tho’ neither birds of moral kind)
“ Yet serve, if hang’d, or stuff’d with straw,
“ To show us which way blows the wind.
“ Thus dirty knaves, or chatt’ring fools,

VER. 142. rueful length of face)] "The decrepid person or figure of a man are no reflections upon his Genius: An honest mind will love and esteem a man of worth, tho' he be deformed or poor. Yet the author of the Dunciad hath libelled a person for his rueful length of face!" Mist's Journal, June 8. This Genius and man of worth, whom an honest mind should love, is Mr Curl. True it is, he stood on the pillory, an incident which will lengthen the face of any man, tho' it were ever so comely, therefore is no reflection on the natural beauty of Mr Curl. But as to reflections on any man's face or figure, Mr Dennis saith excellently ; "Natural deformity comes not by our fault ; 'tis often occasioned by calamities and diseases, which a man can no more help than a monster can his deformity. There is no one misfortune, and no one disease, but what all the rest of mankind are subject to.—But the deformity of this Author is visible, present, lasting, unalterable, and peculiar to himself. 'Tis the mark of God and Nature upon him, to give us warning that we should hold no society with him, as a creature not of our original nor of our species: and they who have refused to take this warning which God and nature have given them, and have, in spite of it, by a senseless presumption, ventured to be familiar with him, have severely suffered, &c. 'Tis certain his original is not from Adam, but from the Devil," &c. DENNIS, Character of Mr P. octavo 1716.

Admirably it is observed by Mr Dennis against Mr Law, p. 33. "That the language of Billingsgate can never be the language of charity, nor consequently of Christianity" I should else be tempted to use the language of a Critic ; for what is more provoking to a commentator, than to behold his author thus portray'd? Yet I consider it really hurts not him ; whereas to call some others dull, might do them prejudice with a world too apt to believe it : Therefore, though Mr D. may call another a little ass or a young toad, far be it from us to call him a toothless lion or an old serpent. Indeed, had I written these notes (as was once my intent) in the learned language, I might have given him the appellations of balatro, calceatum caput, scurra in triviis, being phrases in good esteem and frequent usage among the best learned. But in our mother tongue, were I to tax any gentleman of the Dunciad, surely it should be in words not to the vulgar intelligible ; where-

The good Scriblerus here, as on all occasions, eminently shews his humanity. But it was far otherwise with the gentleman of the Dunciad, whose scurrilities were always personal, and of that nature which provoked every honest man but Mr Pope ; yet never to be lamented, since they occasioned the following amiable Verses :

“ While Malice, Pope, denies thy page
“ Its own celestial fire ;
“ While Critics, and while Bards in rage, “ Admiring, won't admire :

“ While wayward pens thy worth assail,
“ And envious tongues decry ;
“ These times tho' many a Friend bewail,
“ These times bewail not I.

“ But when the World's loud praise is thine,
“ And spleen no more shall blame.
“ When with thy Homer thou shalt shine
“ In one establish'd fame :

“ When none shall rail, and ev'ry lay “ Devote a wreath to thee ;
“ That day (for come it will) that day “ Shall I lament to see.

And lifts his urn, thro' half the heav'ns to flow:

His rapid waters in their passage glow.

This I cannot but think the right: For first, though the difference between burn and glow may seem not very material to others, to me I confess the latter has an elegance, a je ne sçay quoy, which is much easier to be conceived than explained. Secondly, every reader of our poet must have observed how frequently he uses this word glow in other parts of his works: To instance only in his Homer:

(1.) Iliad ix. ver. 726.—With one resentment glows,

(2.) Iliad xi. ver. 626.—There the battle glows.

I am afraid of growing too luxuriant in examples, or I could stretch this catalogue to a great extent ; but these are enough to prove his fondness for this beautiful word, which, therefore, let all future editions replace here.

I am aware, after all, that burn is the proper word to convey an idea of what was said to be Mr Curl's condition at this time : But from that very reason I infer the direct contrary. For surely every lover of our author will conclude he had more humanity than to insult a man on such a misfortune or calamity, which could never befall him purely by his own fault, but from an unhappy communication with another. A taste of his Classic Elocution may be seen in his following Panegyric on the Peace of Utrecht. *O Cupimus Patrem tuum, fulgentissimum illud Orbis Anglicani jubar, adorare!  " PEACE (long wish'd for by almost all Europe) was restored by
 " HARLEY, the Love and Delight of the People of England."

But that this Gentleman can write in a different style, may be seen in a letter he printed to Mr Pope, wherein several Noble Lords are treated in a most extraordinary language, particularly the Lord Bolingbroke abused for that very PEACE which he here makes the single work of the Earl of Oxford, directed by God Almighty.

VER. 213. A youth unknown to Phœbus, &c.] The satire of this Episode being levelled at the base flatteries of authors to worthless wealth or greatness, concludes here with an excellent lesson to such men : That although their pens and praises were as exquisite as they conceit of themselves, yet (even in their own mercenary views) a creature unlettered, who serveth the Passions, or pimpeth to the pleasures, of such vain, braggart, puff Nobility, shall, with those patrons be much more inward, and of them much higher rewarded.

and whose indefatigable Muse produced no less than six Epic poems: Prince and King Arthur, twenty books; Eliza, ten; Alfred, twelve; the Redeemer, six; besides Job, in folio; the whole book of Psalms; the Creation, seven books; Nature of Man, three books; and many more. 'Tis in this sense he is styled afterwards the everlasting Blackmore. Notwithstanding all which, Mr Gildon seems assured, that "this admirable author did not think himself upon the same foot with Homer." Comp. Art of Poetry, vol. i. p. 108.

But how different is the judgment of the author of Characters of the times? p. 25. who says, "Sir Richard Blackmore is unfortunate in happening to mistake his proper talents; and that he has not for many years been so much as named, or even thought of among writers." Even Mr Dennis differs greatly from his friend Mr Gildon: "Blackmore's Action (saith he) has neither unity, nor integrity, nor morality, nor universality; and consequently he can have no Fable, and no Heroic Poem: His Narration is neither probable, delightful, nor wonderful; his characters have none of the necessary qualifications; the things contained in his narration are neither in their own nature delightful, nor numerous enough, nor rightly disposed, nor surprising, nor pathetic."—Nay he proceeds so far as to say Sir Richard has no Genius; first laying down, that "Genius is caused by a furious joy and pride of soul, on the conception of an extraordinary Hint. This gentleman, in his first works, abused the character of Mr Dryden; and in his last, of Mr Pope, accusing him in very high and sober terms of prophaneness and immorality (Essay on Po- lite Writing, vol. ii. p. 270.) on a mere report from Edm. Curl, that he was author of a Travestie on the first Psalm. Mr Dennis took up the same report, but with the addition of what Sir Richard had neglected, an Argument to prove it; which being very curious, we shall here transcribe. “ It was he who burles“ qued the Psalm of David. It is apparent to me that Psalm “ was burlesqued by a Popish rhymester. Let rhyming persons, “ who have been brought up Protestants be otherwise what they “ will, let them be rakes, let them be scoundrels, let them be “ Atheists, yet education has made an invincible impression on “ them in behalf of the sacred writings. But a Popish rhymester
“ has been brought up with a contempt for those sacred writings;
“ now shew me another Popish rhymester but he.” This manner of argumentation is usual with Mr Dennis: he has employed the same against Sir Richard himself, in a like charge of Impiety and Irreligion. “ All Mr Blackmore’s celestial Machines, as they “ cannot be defended so much as by common received opinion, “ so are they directly contrary to the doctrine of the church of “ England; for the visible descent of an Angel must be a mira“ cle. Now it is the doctrine of the Church of England that “ miracles had ceased a long time before Prince Arthur came in“ to the world. Now if the doctrine of the Church of England “ be true, as we are obliged to believe, then are all the celestial “ machines in Prince Arthur unsufferable, as wanting not only “ human but divine probability. But if the machines are suffer-“ able, that is, if they have so much as divine probability, then
“ it follows of necessity that the doctrine of the Church is false.

VER. 270. (As morning pray’r, and flagellation end) It is between eleven and twelve in the morning, after church service, that the criminals are whipt in Bridwell—This is to mark punctually the time of the day: Homer does it by the circumstance of the Judges rising from Court, or of the Labourers dinner; our author by one very proper both to the Persons and the Scene of his poem, which we may remember commenced in the evening of the Lord-mayor’s day: The first book passed in that night; the next morning the games begin in the Strand, thence along Fleet-street (places inhabited by Booksellers) then they proceed by Bridewell toward Fleet-ditch, and lastly, through Ludgate to the City and the Temple of the Goddess.

REMARKS.

VER. 282. “ A peck of coals a-piece] Our indulgent Poet, whenever he has spoken of any dirty or low work, constantly puts us in mind of the poverty of the offenders, as the only extenuation of such practices. Let any one but remark, when a Thief, a Pick-pocket, an Highwayman, or a Knight of the post, are spoken of, how much our hate to those characters is lessened, if they add a needy Thief, a poor Pick pocket, an hungry Highwayman, a starving Knight of the post, etc.

VER. 283. In naked majesty Oldmixon stands,] Mr JOHN OLD-MIXON, next to Mr Dennis, the most ancient Critic of our Nation ; an unjust censurer of Mr Addison in his prose Essay on Criticism, whom also in his imitation of Bohours (called the Arts of Logic and Rhetoric) he misrepresents in plain matter of fact ; for in p. 45. he cites the Spectator as abusing Dr Swift by name, where there is not the least hint of it ; and in p. 304, is so injurious as to suggest that Mr Addison himself writ that Tatler, N^o 43. which says of his own Simile, that “ ’Tis as great as ever “ entered into the mind of man.” “ In Poetry he was not so “ happy as laborious, and therefore characterised by the Tatler “ N^o 62. by the name of Omicron the Unborn Poet.” Curl, Key, p. 13. “ He writ Dramatic works, and a volume of “ Poetry consisting of heroic Epistles, &c. some whereof are “ very well done,” saith that great Judge Mr Jacob, in his Lives of Poets, vol. ii. p. 303.

In his Essay on Criticism and the arts of Logic and Rhetoric, he frequently reflects on our Author. But the top of his character was a Perverter of History, in that scandalous one of the Stuarts in folio, and his Critical History of England, two volumes, octavo. Being employ’d by Bishop Kennet, in publishing the Historians in his Collection, he falsified Daniel’s Chronicle in numberless places. Yet this very man, in the preface to the first of these books, advanced a particular fact to charge three eminent persons of falsifying the lord Clarendon’s History ; which fact has been disproved by Dr Atterbury, late bishop of Rochester, then the only survivor of them ; and the particular part he pretended to be falsified, produced since, after almost ninety years, in that noble author's original manuscript. He was all his life a virulent Party-writer for hire, and received his reward in a small place, which he enjoyed to his death.

VER. 286. “Ah, why, ye Gods! should two and two make four?”] Very reasonably doth this ancient Critic complain: Without doubt it was a fault in the Constitution of things. For the World, as a great writer saith, being given to a man for a subject of disputation, he might think himself mocked with a penurious gift, were any thing made certain. Hence those superior masters of wisdom, the Sceptics and Academics, reasonably conclude that two and two do not make four. SCRIBL.

But we need not go so far, to remark what the Poet principally intended, the absurdity of complaining of old age, which must necessarily happen, as long as we are indulged in our desires of adding one year to another.

VER. 291. Next Smedley div'd] In the surreptitious editions, this whole Episode was applied to an initial letter E——, by whom if they meant the Laureate, nothing was more absurd, no part agreeing with his character. The Allegory evidently demands a person dipped in scandal, and deeply immersed in dirty work: whereas Mr Eusden's writings rarely offended but by their length and multitude, and accordingly are taxed of nothing else in book i. ver. 102. But the person here mentioned, an Irishman, was author and publisher of many scurrilous Pieces,

In a pamphlet, called a Supplement to the Profund, he dealt very unfairly with our Poet, not only frequently imputing to him Mr Broome's verses (for which he might indeed seem in some degree accountable, having corrected what that gentleman did) but those of the Duke of Buckingham, and others: To this rare piece somebody humourously caused

Surely therefore, where the point is so obscure, our author ought not to be censured too rashly.

SCRIBL.

Notwithstanding this affected ignorance of the good Scriblerus, the Daily Gazetteer was a title given very properly to certain papers, each of which lasted but a day. Into this, as a common sink, was received all the trash, which had been before dispersed in several Journals, and circulated at the public expence of the nation. The authors were the same obscure men: though sometimes relieved by occasional essays from Statesmen, Courtiers, Bishops, Deans, and Doctors. The meaner sort were rewarded with Money; others with Places or Benefices, from an hundred to a thousand a year. It appears from the Report of the Secret Committee for inquiring into the Conduct of R. Earl of O. "That
" no less than fifty thousand seventy-seven pounds, eighteen Shillings,
" were paid to Authors and Printers of News-papers, such as
" Free-Britons, Daily-Courants, Corn-Cutter's Journals, Gazet-
" teers, and other political papers, between Feb. 10. 1731. and
" Feb. 10. 1741." Which shews the Benevolence of one Minister to have expended, for the current dulness of ten years in Britain, double the sum which gained Lewis XIV. so much honour, in annual Pensions to Learned men all over Europe. In which, and in a much longer time, not a Pension at Court, nor Preferment in the Church or Universities, of any Consideration, was bestowed on any man distinguished for his Learning separately from Party-merit, or Pamphlet-writing.

It is worth a reflection, that of all the Panegyrics bestowed by these writers on this great Minister, not one is at this day extant or remembered; nor even so much credit done to his Personal character by all they have written, as by one short occasional compliment of our Author:

Seen him I have; but in his happier hour
Of social pleasure, ill exchang'd for Pow'r!
Seen him, uncumber'd by the Venal Tribe,
Smile without Art, and win without a Bribe.

Whirlpools and storms his circling arms invest,
 With all the might of gravitation blest.

 Downward to climb, and backward to advance, 320
 He brings up half the bottom on his head,
 And loudly claims the Journal and the Lead.

The plunging Prelate, and his pond'rous Grace,
 With holy envy gave one Layman place.
 When lo! a burst of thunder shook the flood, 325
 Slow rose a form, in majesty of Mud;
 Shaking the horrors of his fable brows,
 And each ferocious feature grim with ooze.
 Greater he looks, and more than mortal stares:
 Then thus the wonders of the deep declares. 330

REMARKS.

VER. 315. Arnall] WILLIAM ARNALL, bred an Attorney, was a perfect Genius in this sort of work. He began under twenty with furious Party-papers; then succeeded Concanen in the British Journal. At the first publication of the Dunciad, he prevailed on the author not to give him his due place in it, by a letter professing his detestation of such practices as his Predecessor's. But since, by the most unexampled insolence, and personal abuse of several great men, the Poet's particular friends, he most amply deserved a niche in the Temple of Infamy: Witness a paper, called the Free-Briton; a Dedication, intituled, To the Genuine Blunderer, 1732, and many others. He writ for hire, and valued himself upon it; not indeed without cause, it appearing by the aforesaid REPORT, that he received "for Free Britons, and other writings, in the space of four years, no less

VER. 396. Toland and Tindal,] Two persons, not so happy as to be obscure, who writ against the Religion of their Country. Toland, the Author of the Atheist's liturgy, called Pantheisticon, was a spy, in pay, to Lord Oxford. Tindal was author of the Rights of the Christian Church, and Christianity as old as the Creation. He also wrote an abusive pamphlet against Earl S—, which was suppress'd, while yet in MS. by an eminent person, then out of the ministry, to whom he shewed it, expecting his approbation: this Doctor afterwards published the same piece, mutatis mutandis, against that very person.

REMARKS.

VER. 405. As what a Dutchman, &c.] It is a common and fooliſh miſtake, that a ludicrous parody of a grave and celebrated paſſage is a ridicule of that paſſage. The reader therefore, if he will, may call this a parody of the author's own ſublime Similitude in the Eſſay on Man, Ep. iv.

As the ſmall pebble, &c.

but will any body therefore ſuſpect the one to be a ridicule of the other? A ridicule indeed there is in every parody; but when the image is transferred from one ſubject to another, and the ſubject is not a poem burleſqued (which Scriblerus hopes the reader will diſtinguiſh from a burleſque poem) there the ridicule falls not on the thing imitated, but imitating. Thus, for inſtance, when it is, without doubt, an object ridiculous enough. But I think it falls neither on old king Edward, nor his armour, but on his armour-bearer only. REMARKS.

Old Edward's armour beams on Cibber's breaſt,

VER. 413. Boyer the State, and Law the Stage gave o'er. A. Boyer, a voluminous compiler of Annals, Political Collections, &c.—William Law, A. M. wrote with great zeal against the Stage; Mr Dennis answered with as great: Their Books were printed in 1726. Mr Law affirmed, that “The Playhouse “is the temple of the Devil; the peculiar pleasure of the “Devil; where all they who go, yield to the Devil; where all
 “the laughter is a laughter among Devils; and all who are
 “there are hearing Music in the very Porch of Hell.” To which Mr Dennis replied, that “There is every jot as much “difference between a true Play and one made by a Poetaster, as “between two religious books, the Bible and the Alcoran.” Then he demonstrates, that “All those who had written against the “Stage were Jacobites and Non-jurors; and did it always at a “time when something was to be done for the Pretender. Mr “Collier published his Short View when France declared for
 “the Chevalier; and his Dissuasive, just at the great storm, “when the devastation which that hurricane wrought, had a“mazed and astonished the minds of men, and made them ob“noxious to melancholy and desponding thoughts. Mr Law “took the opportunity to attack the Stage upon the great pre“parations he heard were making abroad, and which the Ja- “cobites flattered themselves were designed in their favour.
 “And as for Mr Bedford's Serious Remonstrance, tho' I know “nothing of the time of publishing it, yet I dare to lay odds it “was either upon the Duke d'Amont's being at Sommerset- “house, or upon the late rebellion.” DENNIS, Stage defended against Mr Law, p. ult. The same Mr Law is Author of a book, intitled, An Appeal to all that doubt of or disbelieve the truth of the Gospel; in which he has detailed a System of the rankest Spinozism, for the most exalted Theology; and amongst other things as rare, has informed us of this, that Sir Isaac Newton stole the principles of his philosophy from one Jacob Behman, a

VER. 414. Morgan] A writer against Religion, distinguished no otherwise from the rabble of his tribe, than by the pomposeness of his Title; for having stolen his Morality from Tindal, and his Philosophy from Spinoza, he calls himself, by the courtesy of England, a Moral Philosopher.

Ibid. Mandevil] This writer, who prided himself as much in the Reputation of an Immoral Philosopher, was author of a famous book called the Fable of the Bees; written to prove, that Moral Virtue is the Invention of knaves, and Christian Virtue the Imposition of fools; and that Vice is necessary, and alone sufficient to render Society flourishing and happy, BOOK the THIRD.

A R G U M E N T.

After the other persons are disposed in their proper places of rest, the Goddess transports the King to her Temple, and there lays him to slumber with his head on her lap; a position of marvellous virtue, which causes all the Visions of wild enthusiasts, projectors, politicians, in-amoratos, castle-builders, chemists, and poets. He is immediately carried on the wings of Fancy, and led by a mad Poetical Sibyl, to the Elysian shade; where, on the banks of Lethe, the souls of the dull are dipped by Bavius, before their entrance into this world. There he is met by the ghost of Settle, and by him made acquainted with the wonders of the place, and with those which he himself is destin'd to perform. He takes him to a Mount of Vision, from whence he shews him the past triumphs of the Empire of Dulness, then the present, and lastly the future: how small a part of the world was ever conquered by Science, how soon those conquests were stopped, and those very nations again reduced to her dominion. Then distinguishing the Island of Great Britain, shews by what aids, by what persons, and by what degrees it shall be brought to her Empire. Some of the persons he causes to pass in review before his eyes, describing each by his proper figure, character, and qualifications. On a sudden the Scene shifts, and a vast number of miracles and prodigies appear, utterly surprising and unknown to the King himself, 'till they are explained to be the wonders of his own reign now commencing. On this subject Settle breaks into a congratulation, yet not unmixed with concern, that his own times were but the types of these. He prophesies how first the nation shall be overrun with Farces, Operas, and Shows; how the Throne of Dulness shall be advanced over the Theatres, and set up even at Court: then how her Sons shall preside in the seats of Arts and Sciences: giving a glimpse, or Pisgah-sight of the future Fulness of her Glory, the accomplishment whereof is the subject of the fourth and last book.]

R E M A R K S.

VER. 5, 6, &c. Hereby is intimated that the following Vision is no more than the chimera of the dreamer's brain, and not a real or intended satire on the present Age, doubtless more learned, more enlightened, and more abounding with great Genius's in Divinity, Politics, and whatever arts and sciences, than all the preceding. For fear of any such mistake of our Poet's honest meaning, he hath again, at the end of the Vision, repeated this monition, saying that it all passed through the Ivory-gate, which, (according to the Ancients) denoteth Falsity.

Her tresses staring from Poetic dreams,
And never wash'd, but in Cāstalia's streams.
Taylor, their better Charon, lends an oar,
(Once swan of Thames, tho' now he sings no more.)

REMARKS.

VER. 15. A slip-shod Sibyl] This allegory is extremely just, no conformation of the mind so much subjecting it to real Madness, as that which produces real Dulness. Hence we find the religious (as well as the poetical) Enthusiasts of all ages were ever, in their natural state, most heavy and lumpish; but on the least application of heat, they ran like lead, which of all metals falls quickest into fusion. Whereas fire in a Genius is truly Promethean, it hurts not its constituent parts, but only fits it (as it does well-temper'd steel) for the necessary impressions of art. But the common people have been taught, (I do not know on what foundation) to regard Lunacy as a mark of Wit, just as the Turks and our modern Methodists do of Holiness. But if the cause of Madness assigned by a great Philosopher be true, it will unavoidably fall upon the dunces. He supposes it to be the dwelling over long on one object or idea: Now as this attention is occasioned either by Grief or Study, it will be fixed by Dulness; which hath not quickness enough to comprehend what it seeks, nor force and vigour enough to divert the imagination from the object it laments.

Ver. 24. Old Bavius sits,] Bavius was an ancient Poet, celebrated by Virgil for the like cause as Bays by our author, though not in so christian-like a manner: For heathenishly it is declared by Virgil of Bavius, that he ought to be hated and detested for his evil works; Qui bavium non odit; whereas we have often had occasion to observe our Poet's great Good Nature and Mercifulness thro' the whole course of this Poem. REMARKS.

Mr Dennis warmly contends, that Bavius was no inconsiderable author; nay, that "He and Mævius had (even in Augustus's days) a very formidable party at Rome, who thought them much superior to Virgil and Horace: For (saith he) I cannot believe they would have fixed that eternal brand upon them, if they had not been coxcombs in more than ordinary credit." " but being bribed by a great Lady," &c. (to whom this brave, honest, worthy Gentleman was guilty of no offence but Forgery, proved in open Court.) But it is evident, this verse could not be meant of him; it being notorious, that no Eggs were thrown at that Gentleman. Perhaps therefore it might be intended of Mr Edward Ward the Poet when he stood there.

Ver. 36. And length of ears,] This is a sophisticated reading.
I think I may venture to affirm all the Copyists are mistaken here: I believe I may say the same of the Critics; Dennis, Oldmixon, Welsted have passed it in silence. I have also stumbled at it, and wondered how an error so manifest could escape such accurate persons. I dare assert it proceeded originally from the inadvertancy of some Transcriber, whose head ran on the Pillory, mentioned two lines before; it is therefore amazing that Mr Curl himself should overlook it! Yet that Scho- liast takes not the least notice hereof. That the learned Mist also read it thus, is plain from his ranging this passage among those in which our author was blamed for personal Satire on a Man's face (whereof doubtless he might take the ear to be a part;) so likewise Concanen, Ralph, the Flying-Post, and all the herd of Commentators—Tota armenta sequuntur.

A very little sagacity (which all these Gentlemen therefore wanted) will restore us to the true sense of the Poet, thus,

By his broad shoulders known, and length of years.

See how easy a change; of one single letter! That Mr Settle was old, is most certain; but he was (happily) a stranger to the Pillory. This Note partly Mr THEOBALD's partly SCRIB.

Ver. 37. Settle] Elkanah Settle was once a Writer in vogue as well as Cibber, both for Dramatic poetry and Politics. Mr

" who gave him the preference." Mr Welsted goes yet farther in his behalf: "Poor Settle was formerly the Mighty rival of " places the younger sort inclined to Elkanah." DENNIS. Pref.

to Rem. on Hora.

Ver. 50. Might from Bœotian, &c] Bœotia lay under the ridicule of the Wits formerly, as Ireland does now ; tho' it produced one of the greatest Poets and one of the greatest Generals of Greece :

Bœotum crasso jurares aere natum.

Horat.

And all who since, in mild benighted days,
Mix'd the Owl's ivy with the Poet's bays.

As man's Mæanders to the vital spring 55

Roll all their tides, then back their circles bring

Or whirligigs, twirl'd round by skilful swain,

Suck the thread in, then yield it out again :

All nonsense thus, of old or modern date,

Shall in thee centre, from thee circulate. 60

For this our Queen unfolds to vision true

Thy mental eye, for thou hast much to view :

Old scenes of glory, times long cast behind

Shall, first recall'd, rush forward to thy mind:

REMARKS.

Ver. 67. Ascend this hill, &c.] The scenes of this vision are remarkable for the order of their appearance. First, from v. 67 to 73, those places of the globe are shewn where Science never rose; then from v. 74 to 83, those where she was destroyed by Tyranny; from v. 85 to 95, by inundations of Barbarians; from v. 96 to 106, by Superstition. Then Rome, the Mistress of Arts, described in her degeneracy; and lastly Britain, the scene of the action of the poem; which furnishes the occasion of drawing out the Progeny of Dulneis in review.

Ver. 61, 62. For this our Queen unfolds to vision true

Thy mental eye, for thou hast much to view :]

This has a resemblance to that passage in Milton, book xi. where the Angel

To noble sights from Adam's eye remov'd

The film; then purg'd with Euphrasie and Rue

The visual nerve— For he had much to see.

There is a general allusion in what follows to that whole Episode.

Then stretch thy sight o'er all her rising reign, 65
And let the past and future fire thy brain.

Ascend this hill, whose cloudy point commands
Her boundless empire over seas and lands.
See, round the Poles where keener spangles shine,
Where spices smoke beneath the burning line, 70
(Earth's wide extremes) her sable flag display'd,
And all the nations cover'd in her shade!

Far eastward cast thine eye, from whence the Sun
And orient Science their bright course begun:
One god-like Monarch all that pride confounds, 75
He, whose long wall the wand'ring Tartar bounds;
Heav'ns! what a pile! whole ages perish there,
And one bright blaze turns learning into air.

Thence to the south extend thy gladden'd eyes;
There rival flames with equal glory rise, 80

Ver. 73. in the former Ed.

Far eastward cast thine eye, from whence the sun

And orient Science at a birth begun.

But as this was thought to contradict that Line of the Introduction,

In eldest times, e'er Mortals writ or read, which supposes the sun and science did not set out together, it was alter'd to their bright course begun. But this slip, as usual, escaped the gentlemen of the Dunciad.

REMARKS.

Ver. 69. See round the Poles, &c.] Almost the whole Southern and Northern Continent wrapt in ignorance.

Ver. 73. Our author favours the opinion that all Sciences came from the Eastern nations.

Ver. 75. Chi Ho-am-ti Emperor of China, the same who built the great wall between China and Tartary, destroyed all the books and learned men of that empire.

From shelves to shelves see greedy Vulcan roll,
And lick up all their Physic of the Soul.

How little, mark ! that portion of the ball,
Where faint at best, the beams of Science fall :
Soon as they dawn, from Hyperborean skies 85
Embody'd dark, what clouds of Vandals rise !
Lo ! where Mæotis sleeps, and hardly flows
The freezing Tanais thro' a waste of snows,
The North by myriads pours her mighty sons,
Great nurse of Goths, of Alans, and of Huns ! 90
See Alaric's stern port ! the martial frame
Of Genferic ! and Attila's dread name !
See the bold Ostrogoths on Latium fall ;
See the fierce Visigoths on Spain and Gaul !
See, where the morning gilds the palmy shore 95
(The soil that arts and infant letters bore)
His conqu'ring tribes th' Arabian prophet draws,
And saving Ignorance enthrones by Laws.
See Christians, Jews, one heavy sabbath keep,
And all the western world believe and sleep. 100

REMARKS.

Ver. 81, 82, The Caliph, Omar I. having conquered Ægypt, caused his General to burn the Ptolemæan Library, on the gates of which was this Inscription, $\Psi\Upsilon\chi\eta\varsigma$ $\iota\alpha\tau\pi\epsilon\iota\omicron\upsilon\omicron\varsigma$, the Physic of the Soul.

Lo ! Rome herself, proud mistress now no more
 Of arts, but thund'ring against heathen lore ;
 Her grey-hair'd Synods damning books unread,
 And Bacon trembling for his brazen head.
 Padua, with sighs, beholds her Livy burn; 105
 And ev'n the Antipodes Vigilius mourn.
 See the Cirque falls, th' unpillar'd Temple nods, Streets pav'd with Heroes, Tyber choak'd with Gods :
 'Till Peter's keys some christ'ned Jove adorn,
 And Pan to Moses lends his Pagan horn; 110

REMARKS.

Ver. 102. thund'ring against heathen lore ;] A strong instance of this pious rage is placed to Pope Gregory's account. John of Salisbury gives a very odd encomium of this Pope, at the same time that he mentions one of the strangest effects of this excess of zeal in him : Doctor sanctissimus ille Gregorius, qui melleo prædicationis imbre totam rigavit & inebriavit ecclesiam; non modo Matthesin jussit ab aula, sed, ut traditur a majoribus, incendio dedit probatæ lectionis scripta, Palatinus quæcunque tenebat æpolla. And in another place : Fertur beatus Gregorius bibliothecam combussisse gentilem; quo divinæ pagine gratior esset locus, & major authoritas, et diligentia studiosior. Desiderius, Archbishop of Vienna, was sharply reprov'd by him for teaching Grammar and Literature, and explaining the Poets; because (says this Pope) In uno se ore cum Jovis laudibus Christi laudes non capiunt : Et quam grave nefandumque sit Episcopis canere quod nec Laico religioso conveniat, ipse considera. He is said, among the rest, to have burned Livy; Quia in superstitionibus et sacris Romanorum perpetuo versatur. The same Pope is accused by Vossius, and others, of having caused the noble monuments of the old Roman magnificence to be destroyed, lest those who came to Rome should give more attention to Triumphal Arches, &c. than to holy things. Bayle, Dict.

Ver. 109. 'Till Peter's keys some christ'ned Jove adorn,] After the government of Rome devolved to the Popes, their zeal was for some time exerted in demolishing the heathen Temples and Statues, so that the Goths scarce destroyed more monuments of Antiquity out of rage, than these out of devotion. At length they spared some of the Temples, by converting them to Churches; and some of the Statues, by modifying them into images of Saints. In much later times, it was thought necessary to change the Statues of Apollo and Pallas, on the tomb of Sannazarius, into David and Judith; the Lyre easily became a Harp, and the Gorgon's head turned to that of Holofernes.

It was very natural to shew to the Hero, before all others, his own Son, who had already begun to emulate him in his theatrical, poetical, and even political capacities. By the attitude in which he here presents himself, the reader may be cautioned against ascribing wholly to the Father the merit of the epithet Cibberian, which is equally to be understood with an eye to the Son.

REMARKS.

VER. 149. Jacob, the scourge of Grammar, mark with awe,
“ This Gentleman is son of a considerable Master of Romsey in “ Southamptonshire, and bred to the Law under a very eminent “ Attorney: Who between his more laborious studies, has di“ verted himself with Poetry. He is a great admirer of Poets
“ and their works, which has occasioned him to try his genius
“ that way.— He has writ in prose the Lives of the Poets, “ Essays, and a great many Law-books, The Accomplished Con- “ veyancer, Modern Justice, &c.” GILES JACOB of himself, Lives of Poets, vol. 1. He very grossly, and unprovok'd, abused in that book the Author's Friend, Mr. Gay.

VER. 149, 150. *Jacob, the scourge of Grammar, mark with awe;
Nor less revere him, blunderbuss of Law]*

There may seem some error in these verses, Mr Jacob having proved our Author to have a Respect for him, by this undeniable argument. “ He had once a Regard for my Judgment; other“ wise he would never have subscribed Two Guineas to me, for “ one small book in octavo.” Jacob's Letter to Dennis, printed in Dennis's Remarks on the Dunciad, p. 49. Therefore I should think the appellation of Blunderbuss to Mr. Jacob, like that of Thunderbolt to Scipio, was meant in his honour.

Mr. Dennis argues the same way. “ My writings having “ made great impression on the minds of all sensible men, Mr.
“ P. repented, and to give proof of his Repentance, subscribed to “ my two volumes of select Works, and afterwards to my two “ Volumes of Letters.” Ibid. p. 80. We should hence believe, the Name of Mr. Dennis hath also crept into this poem by some mistake. But from hence, gentle reader! thou may'st beware, when thou givest thy money to such Authors, not to flatter thyself that thy motives are Good nature or Charity.

REMARKS.

Ver. 152. Horneck and Roome] These two were virulent Party-writers, worthily coupled together, and one would think prophetically; since, after the publishing of this piece, the former dying, the latter succeeded him in Honour and Employment. The first was Philip Horneck, Author of a Billingsgate paper called The High German Doctor. Edward Roome was son of an Undertaker for Funerals in Fleetstreet, and writ some of the papers called Pasquin, where by malicious Innuendo's he endeavoured to represent our Author guilty of malevolent practices with a great man then under prosecution of Parliament. Of this man was made the following Epigram:

"You ask why Roome diverts you with his jokes,

"Yet if he writes, as dull as other folks!

"You wonder at it—This, Sir, is the case,

"The jest is lost unless he prints his face.

Ver. 156. Whose tuneful whistling makes the waters pass:] There were several successions of these sort of minor Poets, at Tunbridge, Bath, &c. singing the praise of the Annuals flourishing for that season; whose names indeed would be nameless, and therefore the Poet flurs them over with others in general.

Ver. 165. Ralph James Ralph, a name inserted after the first editions, not known to our Author till he writ a swearing-piece called Sawney, very abusive of Dr. Swift, Mr. Gay, and himself. These lines allude to a thing of his, intitled, Night, a Poem : This low writer attended his own works with pagnegyrics in the Journals, and once in particular praised himself highly above Mr. Addison, in wretched remarks upon that Author's Account of English Poets, printed in a London Journal, Sept. 1728. He was wholly illiterate, and knew no language, not even French. Being advised to read the rules of dramatic poetry before he began a play, he smiled and replied, "Shake-spear writ without rules" He ended at last in the common sink of all such writers, a political News-paper, to which he was recommended by his friend Arnal, and received a small pittance for pay.

 Tho' stale, not ripe ; tho' thin, yet never clear ; 170
 So sweetly mawkish, and so smoothly dull ;
 Heady, not strong ; o'erflowing, tho' not full.

Ah Dennis ! Gildon ah ! what ill-starr'd rage
 Divides a friendship long confirm'd by age ?

REMARKS.

Ver. 169. Flow, Welsted, &c.] Of this Author see the Remark on Book ii. v. 209. But (to be impartial) add to it the following different character of him :

Mr. Welsted had, in his youth, raised so great expectations of his future genius, that there was a kind of struggle between the most eminent in the two Universities, which should have the honour of his education. To compound this, he (civilly) became a member of both, and after having passed some time at the one, he removed to the other. From thence he returned to town, where he became the darling Expectation of all the polite Writers, whose encouragement he acknowledged in his occasional poems, in a manner that will make no small part of the Fame of his protectors. It also appears from his Works, that he was happy in the patronage of the most illustrious characters of the present age.—Encouraged by such a Combination in his favour, he—published a book of poems, some in the Ovidian, some in the Horatian manner, in both which the most exquisite Judges pronounce he even rival'd his masters—His love verses have rescued that way of writing from contempt—In his Translations, he has given us the very soul and spirit of his author. His Ode—his Epistle—his Verses—his Love-tale—all, are the most perfect things in all poetry. WELSTED of Himself, Char. of the Times, 8vo, 1728. pag. 23. 24. It should not be forgot to his honour, that he received at one time the sum of five hundred pounds for secret service, among the other excellent Authors hired to write anonymously for the ministry. See Report of the Secret Committee, &c. in 1742.

Ver. 173. Ah Dennis ! &c.] The reader, who has seen thro' the course of these notes, what a constant attendance Mr. Dennis paid to our Author and all his works, may perhaps wonder he should be mentioned but twice, and so slightly touched, in this Poem. But in truth he looked upon him with some esteem,

Blockheads with reason wicked wits abhor, 175
 But fool with fool is barb'rous civil war.
 Embrace, embrace, my sons! be foes no more!
 Nor glad vile Poets with true Critics gore.
 Behold yon Pair, in strict embraces join'd;
 How like in manners, and how like in mind! 180 for having (more generously than all the rest) set his Name to such writings. He was also a very old man at this time. By his own account of himself in Mr. Jacob's Lives, he must have been above threescore, and happily lived many years after. So that he was senior to Mr. Durfey, who hitherto of all our Poets enjoyed the longest bodily life.

Ver. 179. Behold yon Pair, &c.] One of these was Author of a weekly paper called The Grumbler, as the other was concerned in another called Pasquin, in which Mr. Pope was abused with the Duke of Buckingham, and Bishop of Rocheſter. They also joined in a piece against his first undertaking to translate the Iliad, intitled Homerides, by Sir Illiad Doggrel, printed 1715.

Of the other works of these Gentlemen the world has heard no more, than it would of Mr. Pope's, had their united laudable endeavours discouraged him from pursuing his studies. The union of these two Authors gave occasion to this Epigram:

“ Thus Amphibœna (I have read)
“ At either end assails;

After many Editions of this poem, the Author thought fit to omit the names of these two persons, whose injury to him was of so old a date. In the verses he omitted, it was said that one of them had a pious passion for the other. It was a literal translation of Virgil, Nisus amore pio pueri—and there, as in the original, applied to Friendship: That between Nisus and Eurialus is allowed to make one of the most amiable Episodes in the world, and surely was never interpreted in a perverse sense. But it will astonish the reader to hear, that, on no other occasion than this line, a dedication was written to that Gentleman to induce him to think something further. “ Sir, you are “ known to have all that affection for the beautiful part of the “ creation which God and Nature designed.—Sir, you have a “ very fine Lady—and, Sir, you have eight very fine Children.”
—&c. [Dedic. to Dennis Rem. on the Rape of the Lock] The truth is, the poor Dedicator’s brain was turned upon this article: He had taken into his head, that ever since some books were written against the Stage, and since the Italian opera had prevailed, the nation was infected with a vice not fit to be named: He went so far as to print upon the subject, and concludes his argument with this remark, “ That he cannot help “ thinking the Obscenity of Plays excusable at this juncture; “ since when that execrable sin is spread so wide, it may be of “ use to the reducing mens minds to the natural desire of “ women.” DENNIS, Stage defended against Mr. Law, p. 20. Our Author solemnly declared, he never heard any creature but Most rightly are ancient Words here employed, in speaking of such who so greatly delight in the same. We may say not only rightly, but wisely, yea excellently, inasmuch as for the like practise the like praise is given by Mr. Hearne himself, Glossar. to Rob. of Gloucester; Artic. BEHETT; "Others say BEHIGHT, promised, and so it is used excellently well by Thomas Norton, in his translation into Metre of the cxvith Psalm, v. 14.

Ver. 199. lo, Henley stands, &c.] J. Henley the Orator ; he preached on the Sundays upon Theological matters, and on the Wednesdays upon all other sciences. Each auditor paid one shilling. He declaimed some years against the greatest persons, and occasionally did our Author that honour. WELSTED, in Oratory Transactions, N. 1. published by Henley himself, gives the following account of him. “ He was born at Melton Mow“ brey in Leicestershire. From his own Parish school he went “ to St. John’s College in Cambridge. He began there to be “ uneasy ; for it shock’d him to find he was commanded to believe “ Priest’s orders, he found the examination very short and su“ perficial, and that it was not necessary to conform to the “ Christian religion, in order either to Deaconship or Priesthood. ”

 He came to town, and, after having for some years been a writer for Booksellers, he had an ambition to be so for Ministers of state. The only reason he did not rise in the Church, we are told, “ was the envy of others, and a disrelish entertained “ of him, because he was not qualified to be a compleat Spaniel. ”
 However, he offered the service of his pen to two great men, of opinions and interests directly opposite ; by both of whom being rejected, he set up a new Project, and styled himself the

Ver. 232. (Not half so pleas'd when Goodman prophesy'd)
 Mr. Cibber tells us, in his Life, p. 149. that Goodman being at the rehearsal of a play, in which he had a part, clapped him on the shoulder, and cried, " If he does not make a good actor, " I'll be d—d.—And (says Mr Cibber) I make it a question, " whether Alexander himself, or Charles the twelfth of Sweden, " when at the head of their first victorious armies, could feel a " greater transport in their bosoms than I did in mine."

Ver. 325. On Poets Tombs see Benson's titles writ!] W—m Benson (Surveyor of the Buildings to his Majesty K. George I.) gave in a report to the Lords, that their house and the Painted-chamber adjoining were in immediate danger of falling. Whereupon the Lords met in a committee to appoint some other place to sit in, while the house should be taken down. But it being proposed to cause some other builders first to inspect it, they found it in a very good condition. The Lords upon this, were going upon an address to the King against Benson, for such a misrepresentation; but the Earl of Sunderland, then secretary, gave them an assurance that his Majesty would remove him, which was done accordingly. In favour of this man, the famous Sir Christopher Wren, who had been Architect to the crown for above fifty years, who built most of the Churches in London, laid the first stone of St. Paul's, and lived to finish it, had been displaced from his employment at the age of near ninety years.

His constant cry was, that Mr. P. was an Enemy to the government; and in particular he was the avowed author of a report very industriously spread, that he had a hand in a party paper called the Examiner: A falsehood well known to those yet living, who had the direction and publication of it.

See under Ripley rise a new White-hall,

REMARKS.

Ver. 328. While Jones' and Boyle's united labours fall :] At the time when this poem was written, the banquetting-house of White-hall, the church and piazza of Covent-garden, and the palace and chapel of Somerset-house, the works of the famous Inigo Jones, had been for many years so neglected, as to be in danger of ruin. The portico of Covent-garden had been just then restored and beautified at the expence of the Earl of Burlington ; who, at the same time, by his publication of the designs of that great Master and Palladio, as well as by many noble buildings of his own, revived the true taste of Architecture in this Kingdom.

Ver. 330. Gay dies unpension'd, &c.] See Mr. Gay's fable of the Hare and many Friends. This gentleman was early in the friendship of our author, which continued to his death. He wrote several works of humour with great success, the Shepherd's Week, Trivia, the What-d'ye call-it, Fables ; and lastly, the celebrated Beggar's Opera ; a piece of satire which hit all tastes and degrees of men, from those of the highest quality to the very rabble : That verse of Horace could never be so justly applied as to this. The vast success of it was unprecedented, and almost incredible : What is related of the wonderful effects of the ancient music or tragedy hardly came up to it : Sophocles and Euripides were less followed and famous. It was acted in London sixty three days, uninterrupted ; and renewed the next season with equal applauses. It spread into all the great towns in England, was play'd in many places to the thirtieth and fortieth time, at Bath and Bristol fifty, etc. It made its progress into Wales, Scotland, and Ireland, where it was performed twenty-four days together : It was last acted in Minorca. The fame of it was not confined to the author only ; the ladies carried about with them the favourite songs of it in fans ; and houses were furnished with it in screens. The person who acted Polly, till then obscure, became all at once the favourite of the town ; her pictures were engraved, and sold

Furthermore, it drove out of England, for that season, the Italian Opera, which had carried all before it for ten years. That idol of the Nobility and people, which the great Critic Mr Dennis, by the labours and outcries of a whole life, could not overthrow, was demolished by a single stroke of this gentleman's pen. This happened in the year 1728. Yet so great was his modesty, that he constantly prefixed to all the editions of it this motto, Nos hæc novimus esse nihil.

VER. 331. Hibernian Politics, O Swift! thy fate;] See Book i. ver. 26.

VER. 332. And Pope's, ten years to comment and translate.] The author here plainly laments that he was so long employed in translating and commenting. He began the Iliad in 1713, and finished it in 1719. The edition of Shakespear (which he undertook merely because no body else would) took up near two years more in the drudgery of comparing impressions, rectifying the Scenery, etc. and the Translation of half the Odyſſey employed him from that time to 1725.

After ver. 338. in the first Edit. were the following lines,

Then when these signs declare the mighty year,
 When the dull stars roll round and re-appear;
Let there be darkness! (the dread Pow'r shall say)
 All shall be darkness, as it ne'er were day;
 To their first Chaos Wit's vain works shall fall,
 And universal darkness cover all.

REMARKS.

VER. 333. Proceed, great days! etc.] It may perhaps seem incredible, that so great a Revolution in Learning as is here prophesied, should be brought about by such weak Instruments as have been [hitherto] described in our poem: But do not thou, gentle reader, rest too secure in thy contempt of these Instruments. Remember what the Dutch stories somewhere relate, that a great part of their Provinces was once overflowed, by a small opening made in one of their dykes by a single Water-Rat.

However, that such is not seriously the judgment of our Poet, but that he conceiveth better hopes from the Diligence of our Schools, from the regularity of our Universities, the Discernment of our Great men, the Accomplishments of our Nobility, the Encouragement of our Patrons, and the Genius of our Writers in all kinds (notwithstanding some few exceptions in each) may plainly be seen from his conclusion; where, causing all this vision to pass through the Ivory-Gate, he expressly, in the Language of Poesy, declares all such imaginations to be wild, ungrounded, and fictitious.

BOOK the FOURTH.

A R G U M E N T.

The Poet being, in this Book, to declare the Completion of the Prophecies mention'd at the end of the former, makes a new Invocation; as the greater Poets are wont, when some high and worthy matter is to be sung. He shews the Goddess coming in her Majesty, to destroy Order and Science, and to substitute the Kingdom of the Dull upon earth. How she leads captive the Sciences, and silenceth the Muses; and what they be who succeed in their stead. All her Children, by a wonderful attraction, are drawn about her; and bear along with them divers others, who promote her Empire by connivance, weak resistance, or discouragement of Arts; such as Half-wits, tasteless Admirers, vain Pretenders, the Flatterers of Dunces, or the Patrons of them. All these crowd round her; one of them offering to approach her, is driven back by a Rival, but she commends and encourages both. The first who Speak in form are the Genius's of the Schools, who assure her of their care to advance her Cause, by confining Youth to Words, and keeping them out of the way of real Knowledge. Their Address, and her gracious Answer ; with her Charge to them and the Universities. The Universities appear by their proper Deputies, and assure her that the same method is observed in the progress of Education. The speech of Aristarchus on this subject. They are driven off by a band of young Gentlemen returned from Travel with their Tutors ; one of whom delivers to the Goddess, in a polite oration, an account of the whole Conduct and Fruits of their Travels: presenting to her at the same time a young Nobleman perfectly accomplished. She receives him graciously, and indues him with the happy quality of Want of Shame. She sees loitering about her a number of Indolent Persons abandoning all business and duty, and dying with laziness : To these approaches the Antiquary Annius, intreating her to make them Virtuoso's, and assign them over to him : But Mummio's, another Antiquary, complaining of his fraudulent proceeding, she finds a method to reconcile their difference. Then enter a Troop of people fantastically adorned, offering her strange and exotic presents : Amongst them, one stands forth and demands justice on another, who had deprived him of one of the greatest Curiosities in nature : but he justifies himself so well, that the Goddess gives them both her approbation. She recommends to them to find proper employment for the Indolents before-mentioned, in the study of Butter-flies, Shells, Birds-nests, Moss, &c. but with particular caution, not to proceed beyond Trifles, to any useful or extensive views of Nature, or of the Author of Nature. Against the last of these apprehensions, she is secured by a hearty Address from the Minute Philosophers and Freethinkers, one of whom speaks in the name of the rest. The Youth thus instructed and principled, are delivered to her in a body, by the hands of Silenus; and then admitted to taste the cup of Magus her High Priest, which causes a total oblivion of all Obligations, divine, civil, moral, or rational. To these her Adepts she sends Priests, Attendants, and Comforters, of various kinds; confers on them Orders and degrees; and then dismissing them with a speech, confirming to each his Privileges, and telling what she expects from each, concludes with a Yawn of extraordinary virtue: The Progress and Effects whereof on all Orders of men, and the Consummation of all, in the Restoration of Night and Chaos, conclude the Poem.

B O O K IV.

YET, yet a moment, one dim Ray of Light
 Indulge, dread Chaos, and eternal Night !
 Of darkness visible so much be lent,
 As half to shew, half veil the deep Intent.
 Ye Powr's ! whose Mysteries restor'd I sing, 5
 To whom Time bears me on his rapid wing,

R E M A R K S.

The DUNCIAD, Book IV. This Book may properly be distinguished from the former, by the Name of the GREATER DUNCIAD, not so indeed in Size, but in subject; and so far contrary to the distinction anciently made of the Greater and Lesser Iliad. But much are they mistaken who imagine this Work in any ways inferior to the former, or of any other hand than of our Poet; of which I am much more certain than that the Iliad itself was the Work of Solomon, or the Batrachomyomachia of Homer, as Barnes hath affirmed. BENT.

VER. 1. &c.] This is an Invocation of much Piety. The Poet willing to approve himself a genuine Son, beginneth by shewing (what is ever agreeable to Dulness) his high respect for Antiquity and a Great Family, how dead or dark soever: Next declareth his passion for explaining Mysteries; and lastly his Impatience to be re-united to her. SCRIBL.

VER. 2. dread Chaos, and eternal Night! Invoked, as the Restoration of their Empire is the Action of the Poem.

VER. 4. half to shew, half veil the deep Intent.] This is a great propriety, for a dull Poet can never express himself otherwise than by halves, or imperfectly. SCRIBL.

I understand it very differently; the Author in this work had indeed a deep Intent; there were in it Mysteries or ἀπορρητὰ which he durst not fully reveal, and doubtless in divers verses (according to Milton) —more is meant than meets the ear.

BENT.

Ver. 6. To whom time bears me on his rapid wing,] Fair and softly, good Poet! (cries the gentle Scriblerus on this place.)

Then blessing all, go Children of my Care!
To Practice now from Theory repair.
All my Commands are easy short and full
My Sons be proud, be selfish, and be dull.

Dunciad, Book IV.

Suspend a while your Force inertly strong,
Then take at once the Poet and the Song.

Now flam'd the Dog-star's unpropitious ray,
Smote ev'ry Brain, and wither'd ev'ry Bay ;
Sick was the Sun, the Owl forsook his bow'r,
The moon-struck Prophet felt the madding hour :
Then rose the Seed of Chaos, and of Night,
To blot out Order, and extinguish Light;

REMARKS.

For sure, in spite of his unusual modesty, he shall not travel so fast toward Oblivion, as divers others of more Confidence have done : For when I revolve in my mind the Catalogue of those who have the most boldly promised to themselves Immortality, viz. Pindar, Luis Gongora, Ronfard, Oldham, Lyrics ; Lycophron, Statius, Chapman, Blackmore, Heroics ; I find the one half to be already dead, and the other in utter darkness. But it becometh not us, who have taken up the office of his Commentator, to suffer our Poet thus prodigally to cast away his Life ; contrariwise, the more hidden and abstruse is his work, and the more remote its beauties from common Understanding, the more is it our duty to draw forth and exalt the same, in the face of Men and Angels. Herein shall we imitate the laudable Spirit of those, who have (for this very reason) delighted to comment on dark and uncouth Authors, and even on their darker Fragments ; preferred Ennius to Virgil, and chosen to turn the dark lanthorn of LYCOPHRON, rather than to trim the everlasting Lamp of Homer.

SCRIBL.

Ver. 7. Force inertly strong,] Alluding to the Vis inertiae of Matter, which, though it really be no power, is yet the foundation of all the Qualities and Attributes of that sluggish Substance.

Ver. 14. To blot out Order, and extinguish Light ;] The two great Ends of her Mission ; the one in quality of Daughter of Chaos, the other as Daughter of Night. Order here is to be understood extensively, both as Civil and Moral ; the distinctions between high and low in Society, and true and false in Individuals : Light as Intellectual only, Wit, Science, Arts.

Of dull and venal a new World to mold 15
And bring Saturnian days of Lead and Gold.

She mounts the Throne : her head a Cloud conceal'd,
In broad Effulgence all below reveal'd,
('Tis thus aspiring Dulness ever shines)
Soft on her lap her Laureate son reclines. 20

R E M A R K S.

Ver. 15. Of dull and venal] The Allegory continued ; dull referring to the extinction of Light or Science ; venal to the destruction of Order, and the Truth of Things.

Ibid. a new World] In allusion to the Epicurean opinion, that from the Dissolution of the natural World into Night and Chaos a new one should arise ; this the Poet alluding to, in the the Production of a new moral World, makes it partake of its original Principles.

Ver. 16. Lead and Gold.] i. e. dull and venal.

Ver. 18. all below reveal'd,] It was the opinion of the Ancients, that the Divinities manifested themselves to Men by their Back-parts, Virg. Æn. i. et avertens, rosea cervice refulsit. But this passage may admit of another exposition.—Vet. Adag. The higher you climb the more you shew your A—— Verified in no instance more than in Dulness aspiring. Emblematized also by an Ape climbing and exposing his posteriors.

SCRIBL.

VER. 20. her Laureate son reclines.] With great judgment it is imagined by the Poet, that such a Colleague as Dulness had elected, should sleep on the Throne, and have very little share in the action of the Poem. Accordingly he hath done little or nothing from the day of his Anointing ; having past thro' the second book without taking part in any thing that was transacted about him ; and through the third in profound Sleep. Nor ought this, well considered, to seem strange in our days, when so many King-consorts have done the like. SCRIBL.

This verse our excellent Laureate took so to heart, that he appealed, to all mankind, “ if he was not as seldom asleep as any fool? ” But it is hoped the Poet hath not injured him, but rather verified his Prophecy (p. 243. of his own Life, 8vo, ch. ix.) where he says “ the reader will be as much pleased to find me a Dunce in my Old Age, as he was to prove me a brisk

Beneath her foot-stool, Science groans in Chains,
 And Wit dreads Exile, Penalties and Pains.
 There foam'd rebellious Logic, gagg'd and bound,
 There, stript, fair Rhet'ric languish'd on the ground ;
 His blunted Arms by Sophistry are born, 25
 And shameless Billingsgate her Robes adorn.

REMARKS.

“blockhead in my Youth.” Wherever there was any room for Briskness, or Alacrity of any sort, even in sinking, he hath had it allowed ; but here, where there is nothing for him to do but to take his natural rest, he must permit his Historian to be silent. It is from their actions only that Princes have their character, and Poets from their works : And if in those he be as much asleep as any fool, the Poet must leave him and them to sleep to all eternity. BENT.

Ibid. her Laureate] “When I find my Name in the satirical works of this Poet, I never look upon it as any malice meant to me, but PROFIT to himself. For he considers that my Face is more known than most in the nation ; and therefore a Lick at the Laureate will be a sure bait ad captandum vulgus, to catch little readers.” Life of Colley Cibber, ch. ii.

Now if it be certain, that the works of our Poets have owed their success to this ingenious expedient, we hence derive an unanswerable Argument, that this Fourth DUNCIAD, as well as the former three, hath had the Author's last hand, and was by him intended for the Press : Or else to what purpose hath he crown'd it, as we see, by this finishing stroke, the profitable Lick at the Laureate? BENT.

VER. 21, 22. Beneath her foot stool, etc.] We are next presented with the pictures of those whom the Goddess leads in Captivity. Science is only depressed and confined so as to be rendered useless ; but Wit or Genius, as a more dangerous and active enemy, punished, or driven away : Dulness being often reconciled in some degree with Learning, but never upon any terms with Wit. And accordingly it will be seen that she admits something like each Science, as Casuistry, Sophistry, etc. but nothing like Wit, Opera alone supplying its place.

Morality, by her false Guardians drawn,
Chicane in Furs, and Casuistry in Lawn,
 Gasps, as they straiten at each end the cord,
 And dies, when Dulness gives her Page the word 30
 Mad Máthesis alone was unconfin'd,
 Too mad for mere material chains to bind,
 Now to pure Space lifts her extatic stare,
 Now running round the Circle, finds it square.
 But held in ten-fold bonds the Muses lie, 35
 Watch'd both by Envy's and by Flatt'ry's eye:

R E M A R K S.

VER. 27. by her false Guardians drawn,] Morality is the Daughter of Astræa. This alludes to the Mythology of the ancient Poets; who tell us that in the Gold and Silver ages, or in the State of Nature, the God's cohabited with men here on Earth; but when by reason of human degeneracy men were forced to have recourse to a Magistrate, and that the Ages of Brass and Iron came on; (that is, when Laws were wrote on brazen tablets enforced by the Sword of Justice) the Celestials soon retired from Earth, and Astræa last of all; and then it was she left this her Orphan Daughter in the hands of the Guardians aforesaid. SCRIBL.

VER. 30. gives her Page the word] There was a Judge of this name, always ready to hang any man that came before him, of which he was suffered to give a hundred miserable examples during a long life, even to his dotage.—Tho' the candid Scriblerus imagined Page here to mean no more than a Page or Mute, and to allude to the custom of strangling State Criminals in Turkey by Mutes or Pages. A practice more decent than that of our Page, who, before he hanged any one, loaded him with reproachful language. SCRIBL.

VER. 31. Mad Máthesis] Alluding to the strange Conclusions some Mathematicians have deduced from their principles, concerning the real Quantity of Matter, the Reality of Space, &c.

VER. 34. running round the Circle, finds it square.] Regards the wild and fruitless attempts of squaring the Circle.

VER. 36. Watch'd both by Envy's and by Flatt'ry's eye] One of the misfortunes falling on Authors, from the Ad for sub-

There to her heart sad Tragedy addrest
 The dagger wont to pierce the Tyrant's breast ;
 But sober History restrain'd her rage,
 And promis'd Vengeance on a barb'rous age. 40
 There sunk Thalia, nerveless, cold, and dead,
 Had not her Sister Satire held her head ;
 Nor could'st thou, CHESTERFIELD ! a tear refuse,
 Thou wept'st, and with thee wept each gentle Muse.

REMARKS.

jecting Plays to the power of a Licensor, being the false representations to which they were expos'd, from such as either gratify'd their Envy to Merit, or made their Court to greatness, by perverting general Reflections against Vice into Libels on particular Persons.

VER. 39. But sober History] History attends on Tragedy, Satire on Comedy, as their substitutes in the discharge of their distinct functions; the one in high life, recording the crimes and punishments of the great; the other in low, exposing the vices or follies of the common people. But it may be asked, How came History and Satire to be admitted with impunity to minister comfort to the Muses, even in the presence of the Goddess, and in the midst of all her triumphs? a question, says Scriblerus, which we thus resolve: History was brought up in her infancy by Dulness herself; but being afterwards espoused into a noble house, she forgot (as is usual) the humility of her birth, and the cares of her early friends. This occasioned a long estrangement between her and Dulness. At length, in process of time, they met together in a Monk's Cell, were reconciled, and became better friends than ever. After this they had a second quarrel, but it held not long, and are now again on reasonable terms, and so are like to continue. This accounts for the connivance shewn to History on this occasion. But the boldness of SATIRE springs from a very different cause; for the reader ought to know, that she alone of all the sisters is unconquerable, never to be silenced, when truly inspired and animated (as should seem) from above, for this very purpose, to oppose the kingdom of Dulness to her last breath.

VER. 43. Nor could'st thou, etc.] This noble Person in the year 1737, when the Act aforesaid was brought into the House

When lo ! a Harlot form soft sliding by, 45
 With mincing step, small voice, and languid eye :
 Foreign her air, her robe's discordant pride
 In patch-work flutt'ring, and her head aside :
 By fingering Peers up-held on either hand,
 She tripp'd and laugh'd, too pretty much to stand ;
 Cast on the prostrate Nine a scornful look, 51
 Then thus in quaint Recitativo spoke.

O Cara ! Cara ! silence all that train :
 Joy to great Chaos ! let Division reign :

of Lords opposed it in an excellent speech (says Mr Cibber) “ with a lively spirit, and uncommon eloquence.” This speech had the honour to be answered by the said Mr Cibber, with a lively spirit also, and in a manner very uncommon, in the 8th Chapter of his Life and Manners. And here, gentle Reader, would I gladly insert the other speech, whereby thou mightest judge between them : but I must defer it on account of some differences not yet adjusted between the noble Author, and myself, concerning the True Reading of certain passages. BENT.

VER. 45. When lo ! a Harlot form] The Attitude given to this Phantom represents the nature and genius of the Italian Opera; its affected airs, its effeminate sounds, and the practice of patching up these Operas with favourite Songs, incoherently put together. These things were supported by the subscriptions of the Nobility. This circumstance that OPERAS should prepare for the opening of the grand Sessions was prophesied of in Book iii. ver. 304.

Already Opera prepares the way,

The sure fore-runner of her gentle sway.

VER. 54. let Division reign :] Alluding to the false taste of playing tricks in Music with numberless divisions, to the neglect of that harmony which conforms to the Sense and applies

I M I T A T I O N S.

VER. 54. Joy to great Chaos !]

Joy to great Caesar—The beginning of a famous old Song.

Chromatic tortures soon shall drive them hence, 55
 Break all their nerves, and fritter all their sense :
 One Trill shall harmonize joy, grief, and rage,
 Wake the dull Church, and lull the ranting Stage;
 To the same notes thy sons shall hum, or snore,
 And all thy yauning daughters cry, encore, 60
 Another Phœbus, thy own Phœbus, reigns,
 Joys in my jigs, and dances in my chains.
 But soon, ah soon, Rebellion will commence,
 If Music meanly borrows aid from Sense :
 Strong in new Arms, lo! Giant HANDEL stands,
 Like bold Briareus, with a hundred hands; 66
 To stir, to rouze, to shake the Soul he comes,
 And Jove's own Thunders follow Mars's Drums.
 Arrest him, Empress; or you sleep no more—
 She heard and drove him to th' Hibernian shore.
 And now had Fame's posterior Trumpet blown,
 And all the nations summon'd to the Throne. 72

REMARKS.

to the Passions. Mr Handel had introduced a great number of Hands, and more variety of Instruments into the Orchestra, and employed even Drums and Cannon to make a fuller Chorus; which prov'd so much too manly for the fine Gentlemen of his age, that he was obliged to remove his Music into Ireland. After which they were reduced, for want of Composers, to practise the patch-work above mentioned.

VER. 59. Thy own Phœbus reigns,]

Tuus jam regnat Apollo.

Virg:

Not the ancient Phœbus, the God of Harmony, but a modern Phœbus of French extraction, married to the Princess Galimathia, one of the handmaids of Dulness, and an assistant to Opera. Of whom see Bouhours, and other Critics of that nation.

SCRIBL.

The young, the old, who feel her inward sway,
One instinct seizes, and transports away.

None need a guide, by sure Attraction led, 75 and strong impulsive gravity of Head :

None want a place, for all their Centre found,
Hung to the Goddess, and coher'd around.

Not closer, orb in orb, conglob'd are seen
The buzzing Bees about their dusky Queen. 80

The gath'ring number, as it moves along,
Involves a vast involuntary throng.

Who gently drawn, and struggling less and less,
Roll in her Vortex, and her pow'r confess.

REMARKS.

VER. 71. Fame's posterior Trumpet] Posterior, viz. her second or more certain Report ; unless we imagine this word posterior to relate to the position of one of her Trumpets, according to Hudibras :

*She blows not both with the same Wind,
But one before and one behind ;
And therefore modern Authors name
One good, and t'other evil Fame.*

VER. 75, 77. None need a guide.—None want a place,] The sons of Dulness want no instructors in study, nor guides in life : They are their own masters in all Sciences, and their own Heralds and introducers into all places.

VER. 76. to 101. It ought to be observed that here are three classes in this assembly. The first of men absolutely and avowedly dull, who naturally adhere to the Goddess, and are imaged in the simile of the Bees about their Queen. The second involuntarily drawn to her, tho' not caring to own her influence ; from v. 81 to 90. The third of such, as tho' not members of her state, yet advance her service by flattering Dulness, cultivating mistaken talents, patronizing vile scriblers, discouraging living merit, or setting up for wits, and Men of taste in arts they understand not ; from ver. 91 to 101.

Not those alone who passive own her laws 85
 But who, weak Rebels, more advance her cause.
 Whate'er of Dunce in College or in Town
 Sneers at another, in toupee or gown ;
 Whate'er of mungril no one class admits,
 A wit with dunces, and a dunce with wits. 90

Nor absent they, no members of her state,
 Who pay her homage in her sons, the Great ;
 Who false to Phœbus, bow the knee to Baal ;
 Or impious, preach his word without a call,

R E M A R K S.

VER. 86. weak Rebels more advance her cause.] Such as those, who affect to oppose her Government, by setting up for patrons of Letters, without knowing how to judge of merit. The consequence of which is, that, as all true merit is modest and reserved ; and the false, forward and presuming ; and the Judge easily imposed upon ; Fools get the rewards due to genius. For as the Poet says of one of these Patrons,

*Dryden alone, (what wonder ?) came not nigh,
 Dryden alone escap'd this judging eye.*

And thus, as he rightly observes, these weak Rebels unwittingly advance the cause of her they would be thought most to oppose.

For while no rewards are given for the Encouragement of Letters, Genius will support itself on the footing of that reputation, which men of wit will always win from the Dunces. But an undue distribution of the rewards of Learning will entirely depress or disgust all true genius ; which now not only finds itself robbed of the honours it might claim from others, but defeated of that very reputation it would otherwise have won for itself. For, as the course of things is ordered, general reputations when it comes into rivalry, is rather attendant on favour and high station, than on the simple endowments of Wit and Learning. Hence we conclude, that unless the Province of encouraging Letters be wisely and faithfully administered, it were better for them that there were no encouragements at all.

VER. 93. false to Phœbus] Spoken of the ancient and true

Patrons who sneak from living worth to dead, 95
 Withold the pension, and set up the head ;
 Or vest dull Flatt'ry in the sacred Gown ;
 Or give from fool to fool the Laurel crown.
 And (last and worse) with all the cant of wit,
 Without the soul, the Muse's Hypocrite. 100

There march'd the bard and blockhead side by side,
 Who rhym'd for hire, and patroniz'd for pride.
 Narcissus prais'd with all a Parson's pow'r,
 Look'd a white lilly sunk beneath a show'r.
 There mov'd Montalto with superior air ; 105
 His stretch'd-out arm display'd a Volume fair ;
 Courtiers and Patriots in two ranks divide,
 Thro' both he pass'd, and bow'd from side to side :
 But as in graceful act with awful eye
 Compos'd he stood, bold Benson thrust him by : 110
 On two unequal crutches propt he came,
 Miton's on this, on that one Johnston's name.

REMARKS.

Phœbus ; not the French Phœbus, who hath no chosen Priests or Poets, but equally inspires any man that pleaseth to sing or preach. SCRIBL.

VER. 108.—bow'd from side to side :] As being of no one party.

VER. 110. bold Benson] This man endeavoured to raise himself to Fame, by erecting monuments, striking coins, setting up heads, and procuring translations of Milton ; and afterwards by as great passion for Arthur Johnston, a Scotch physician's Version of the Psalms, of which he printed many fine Editions. See more of him, Book iii. ver. 325.

The decent Knight retir'd with sober rage,
 Withdrew his hand, and clos'd the pompous page.
 But (happy for him as the times went then) 115
 Appear'd Apollo's May'r and Aldermen,
 On whom three hundred gold-capt youths await,
 To lug the pond'rous volume off in state.

When Dulness, smiling—"Thus revive the Wits!"
 But murder first and mince them all to bits; 120
 As erst Medea (cruel, so to save!)
 A new Edition of old Æson gave;
 Let standard Authors, thus, like trophies born,
 Appear more glorious as more hack'd and torn.

VER. 114.

"What! no respect, he cry'd, for SHAKESPEAR's page?"

REMARKS.

VER. 113. The decent Knight] An eminent person who was about to publish a very pompous Edition of a great Author at his own expence.

VER. 115. &c. These four lines were printed in a separate leaf by Mr. Pope in the last Edition, which he himself gave, of the Dunciad, with directions to the printer, to put this leaf into its place as soon as Sir T. H.'s Shakespear should be published.

VER. 119. "Thus revive, &c."] The Goddess applauds the practice of tacking the obscure names of Persons not eminent in any branch of learning, to those of the most distinguished Writers; either by printing Editions of their works with impertinent alterations of their Text, as in the former instances; or by setting up Monuments disgraced with their own vile names and inscriptions, as in the latter.

VER. 122. old Æson] Of whom Ovid (very applicable to these restored authors)

Æson miratur,
 Dissimilemque animum subiit—

And you, my Critics! in the checquer'd shade, 125
 Admire new light thro' holes yourselves have made.

Leave not a foot of verse, a foot of stone,
 A Page, a Grave, that they can call their own;
 But spread, my sons, your glory thin or thick,
 On passive paper, or on solid brick. 130
 So by each Bard an Alderman shall sit,
 A heavy Lord shall hang at every Wit,

REMARKS.

VER. 128. A Page, a Grave,] For what less than a Grave can be granted to a dead author? or what less than a Page can be allowed a living one?

VER. 128. A Page,] Pagina, not Pedissequus. A Page of a Book, not a Servant, Follower, or Attendant: no Poet having had a Page since the death of Mr Thomas Durfey.

SCRIBL.

VER. 131. So by each Bard an Alderman, &c.] Vide the Tombs of the Poets, Editio Westmonasteriensis.

Ibid.—an Alderman shall sit,] Alluding to the Monument erected for Butler by Alderman Barber.

VER. 132. A heavy Lord shall hang at ev'ry Wit,] How unnatural an Image! and how ill-supported, saith Aristarchus. Had it been,

A heavy Wit shall hang at ev'ry Lord, something might have been said, in an Age so distinguished for well-judging Patrons. For LORD, then, read LOAD; that is, of Debts here, and of Commentaries hereafter. To this purpose, conspicuous is the case of the poor Author of Hudibras, whose body, long since weighed down to the Grave by a load of debts, has lately had a more unmerciful load of Commentaries laid upon his Spirit; wherein the Editor has atchieved more than Virgil himself, when he turned Critic, could boast of,

 And turn the Council to a Grammar School! 180
 For sure, if Dulness sees a grateful Day,
 'Tis in the shade of Arbitrary Sway.

REMARKS.

this King, James the first, took upon himself to teach the Latin tongue to Car, Earl of Somerset; and that Gondomar the Spanish Ambassador would speak false Latin to him, on purpose to give him the pleasure of correcting it, whereby he wrought himself into his good graces.

This great prince was the first who assumed the title of Sacred Majesty, which his loyal Clergy transferred from God to Him. "The principles of Passive Obedience and Non-resistance" (says the Author of the Dissertation on Parties, Letter 8.) "which before his time had skulked perhaps in some old Homily, were talked, written, and preached into vogue in that inglorious reign."

VER. 181, 182. if Dulness sees a grateful Day, 'Tis in the shade of Arbitrary Sway.] And grateful it is in Dulness to make this confession. I will not say she alludes to that celebrated verse of Claudius,

 Quam sub Rege pio.*

But this I will say, that the words Liberty and Monarchy have been frequently confounded and mistaken one for the other by the gravest authors. I should therefore conjecture, that the genuine reading of the forecited verse was thus,

*nunquam Libertas gratior exstat
 Quam sub Lege pia,*

and that Rege was the reading only of Dulness herself: And therefore she might allude to it. SCRIBL.

I judge quite otherwise of this passage: The genuine reading is Libertas, and Rege: So Claudian gave it. But the error lies in the first verse: It should bet exit not exstat, and then the meaning will be, that Liberty was never lost, or went away with so good a grace, as under a good King; it being without doubt a tenfold shame to lose it under a bad one.

O! if my sons may learn one earthly thing,
 Teach but that one, sufficient for a King;
 That which my Priests, and mine alone, maintain,

REMARKS.

This farther leads me to animadvert upon a most grievous piece of nonsense to be found in all the Editions of the Author of the Dunciad himself. A most capital one it is, and owing to the confusion above mentioned by Scriblerus, of the two words Liberty and Monarchy. Essay on Crit.

VER. 192. Aristotle's friends.] A Satire on SCHOOL PHILOSOPHY, which was founded in a corrupt Peripatetism, and is the Art of making a great deal from nothing, in Theology ; and nothing from a great deal, in Physics.

Ibid. A hundred head of Aristotle's friends.] The Philosophy of Aristotle had suffered a long disgrace in this learned University : being first expelled by the Cartesian, which, in its turn, gave place to the Newtonian. But it had all this while some faithful followers in secret, who never bowed the knee to Baal, nor acknowledged any strange God in Philosophy. These, on this new appearance of the Goddess, come out like Confessors, and make an open profession of the ancient faith, in the ipse dixit of their Master. Thus far SCRIBLERUS.

But the learned Mr Colley Cibber takes the matter quite otherwise ; and that this various fortune of Aristotle relates not to his natural; but his moral Philosophy. For, speaking of that University in his time, he says, they seemed to have as implicit a Reverence for Shakespear and Johnson, as formerly for the ETHICS of Aristotle. See his Life, p. 385. One would think this learned professor had mistaken Ethics for Physics; unless he might imagine the morals, too were grown into disuse, from the relaxation they admitted of during the time he mentions, viz. while He and the Players were at Oxford.

Ibid. A hundred head, &c.] It appears by this the Goddeffs had been careful of keeping up a Succession, according to the rule,

Anteveni ; & sobolem armento sortire quotannis.

It is remarkable with what dignity the Poet here describes the friends of this ancient Philosopher. Horace does not observe the same decorum with regard to those of another sect, when he says, Cum ridere voles Epicuri de grege Porcum. But the word Drove, Armentum, here understood, is a word of honour, as the most noble Festus the Grammarian assures us, Armentum id genus pecoris appellatur, quod est idoneum opus armorum. And alluding to the temper of this warlike breed, our poet very appositely calls them a hundred head. SCRIBL.

VER. 194. [Tho' Christ-church] This line is doubtless spurious, and foisted in by the impertinence of the Editor; and accordingly we have put it between Hooks. Tho' I have the greatest deference to the penetration of this eminent scholiast, and must own that nothing can be more natural than his interpretation, or juster than that rule of criticism, which directs us to keep to the literal sense, when no apparent absurdity accompanies it (and sure there is no absurdity in supposing a Logician on Horseback) yet still I must needs think the Hackneys here celebrated were not real Horses, nor even Centaurs, which, for the sake of the learned Chiron, I should rather be inclined to think, if I were forced to find them four legs, but downright plain men, tho' Logicians: and only thus metamorphosed by a rule of rhetoric, of which Cardinal Perron gives us an example, where he calls Clavius, Un Esprit pesant, lourd, sans subtilité, ni gentillesse, "UN-GROSS CHEVAL D'ALLEMAGNE."

Here I profess to go opposite to the whole stream of commentators. I think the poet only aimed, tho' awkwardly, at an elegant Grecism in this representation; for in that language the word ἵππος [Horse] was often prefixed to others, to denote greatness or strength; as ἵππολόπαθον, ἵπποδάσσειον, ἵππομάραθρον, and particularly, ἵππογινώμων, a great connoisseur, which comes nearest to the case in hand. 220

REMARKS.

Ver. 214 Critics like me—] Alluding to two famous Editions of Horace and Milton ; whose richest veins of Poetry he had prodigally reduced to the poorest and most beggarly prose—Verily the learned scholiast is grievously mistaken. Aristarchus, is not boasting here of the wonders of his art in annihilating the sublime, but of the usefulness of it, in reducing the turgid to its proper class ; the words make it prose again, plainly shewing that prose it was, tho' ashamed of its original, and therefore to prose it should return. Indeed, much is it to be lamented that Dulness doth not confine her critics to this useful task ; and commission them to dismount what Aristophanes calls ῥημάτων ἰπποβάμονα, all prose on horseback. SCRIBL.

Ver. 217. 218, While tow'ring o'er your Alphabet, like Saul,—Stands our Digamma,] Alludes to the boasted restoration of the Æolic Digamma, in his long projected Edition of Homer. He calls it something more than Letter, from the enormous figure it would make among the other letters, being one Gamma set upon the shoulders of another.

Ver. 220. of Me or Te,] It was a serious dispute, about which the learned were much divided, and some treatises written :

REMARKS.

Had it been about Meum and Tuum, it could not be more contested, than whether at the end of the first Ode of Horace, to read, Me doctarum bedere præmia frontium, or, Te, doctarum bedere—By this the learned scholiast would seem to insinuate that the dispute was not about Meum and Tuum, which is a Mistake: For, as a venerable sage observeth, Words are the counters of Wise-men, but the money of fools; so that we see their property was indeed concerned.

Ver. 222. Or give up Cicero to C or K.] Grammatical disputes about the manner of pronouncing Cicero's name in Greek. It is a dispute, whether in Latin the name of Hermagoras should end in as or a. Ver. 239, 240. Ah, think not, Mistress! &c.—In Folly's Cap, &c.] By this it appears the Dunces and Fops, mentioned ver. 139, 140. had a contention of rivalry for the Goddess's favour on this great day. Those got the start, but these make it up by their Spokesman in the next speech. It seems as if Aristarchus here first saw him advancing with his fair Pupil.

SCRIBL.

Ver 244. And much Divinity without a Nũc.] A word much affected by the learned Aristarchus in common conversation, to signify Genius or natural acumen. But this passage has a farther view. Nũc was the Platonic term for Mind, or the first cause, and that system of Divinity is here hinted at which terminates in blind nature without a Nũc: such as the Poet after-

Ver. 247. the heavy Canon] Canon here, if spoken of Artillery, is in the plural number; if of the Canons of the House, in the singular, and meant only of one: in which case, I suspect the Pole to be a false reading, and that it should be the Poll or head of that Canon. It may be objected, that this is a mere Paranomasia or Pun. But what of that? Is any figure of speech more apposite to our gentle Goddess, or more frequently used by her and her children, especially of the University? Doubtless, it better suits the Character of Dulness, yea of a Doctor, than that of an Angel; yet Milton feared not to put a considerable quantity into the mouths of his. It hath indeed been observed, that they were the Devil's Angels, as if he did it to suggest the Devil was the Author as well of false Wit, as of false Religion, and that the Father of Lies was also the Father of Puns. But this is idle: It must be owned a Christian practice, used in the primitive times by some of the Fathers, and in later by most of the Sons of the Church; till the debauched reign of Charles the second, when the shameless Passion for Wit overthrew every thing: and even the best Writers admitted it, provided it was obscene, under the name of the Double entendre. SCRIBL.

Ver. 248. And Metaphysic smokes, &c.] Here the learned Aristarchus ending the first member of his harangue in behalf of Words, and entering on the other half, which regards the teaching of Things, very artfully connects the two parts in an encomium on METAPHYSICS, a kind of Middle nature between

Ver. 272. lac'd Governor] Why lac'd? Because Gold and Silver are necessary trimming to denote the dress of a person of rank, and the Governor must be supposed so in foreign countries, to be admitted into courts and other places of fair reception. But how comes Aristarchus to know at sight that this Governor came from France? Know, Why, by the laced coat. SCRIBL.

Ibid. Whore, Pupil, and lac'd Governor] Some Critics have objected to the order here, being of opinion that the Governor should have the precedence before the Whore, if not before the Pupil. But were he so placed, it might be thought to insinuate that the Governor led the Pupil to the Whore, and were the Pupil placed first, he might be supposed to lead the Governor to her. But our impartial Poet, as he is drawing their picture, represents them in the order in which they are generally seen; namely the Pupil between the Whore and the Governor; but placeth the Whore first, as she usually governs both the other.

Ver. 274. stern as Ajax' spectre, strode away.] See Homer Odyss xi. where the Ghost of Ajax turns sullenly from Ulysses the Traveller, who had succeeded against him in the dispute for the arms of Achilles. Infelix Theseus, Phlegyasque miserrimus omnes Admonet—

Virg.

But Annius, crafty Seer, with ebon wand,
 And well-dissembled em'rald on his hand,
 False as his Gems, and canker'd as his Coins,
 Came, cramm'd with capon, from where Pollio dines.
 Soft, as the wily Fox is seen to creep, 351
 Where bask on sunny banks the simple sheep,
 Walk round and round, now prying here, now there,
 So he; but pious, whisper'd first his pray'r.

REMARKS.

Ver. 348. well-dissembled em'rald on his hand] The Poet seems here, as Wits are ever licentious, to upbraid this useful Member of Society for his well-dissembled em'rald; whereas in truth it was by that circumstance he should have been commended. This worthy person was, I suppose, a Factor between the poor and rich, to supply these with their imaginary wants, and to relieve those from their real ones. Now I ask how can this Factorage be carried on without well dissembling. The rich Man wants an Em'rald; his want is allowed on all hands to be imaginary. And what fitter for an imaginary want than an imaginary em'rald? For Philosophers agree, that *imagination*s are not to be cured by their contrary realities, but to be removed, if troublesome, by other imaginations; and these again in their turn, by others. Consider it in another light. An Em'rald, we agree, is an imaginary want; but an Em'rald of Golconda is much more so. Now, if, in a true Em'rald of France, the colour, the lustre, and the bulk, be all improv'd, what is wanting in it, that may be thought to concur to that solid happiness, which we find an Em'rald is capable of giving to enlarged, and truly improved Minds? Certainly, nothing but that Golcondical substantial form, which is neither seen, felt, nor understood; a certain essentiuncula, or as we may say, esprit folet, with which substances had been for many ages possessed, but is lately sneaked out of matter, is no longer in nature, nor (what is more to the purpose) no longer in fashion. Grant, gracious Goddess! grant me still to cheat,
 O may thy cloud still cover the deceit! 356
 Thy choicer mists on this assembly shed,
 But pour them thickest on the noble head.
 So shall each youth, assisted by our eyes,
 See other Cæsars, other Homers rise; 360
 Thro' twilight ages hunt th' Athenian fowl,
 Which Chalcis Gods, and Mortals call an Owl,
 Now see an Attys, now a Cecrops clear,
 Nay, Mahomet! the Pigeon at thine ear;
 Be rich in ancient brass, tho' not in gold, 365
 And keep his Lares, tho' his house be sold;

REMARKS.

Ver. 355. still to cheat,] Some read skill; but that is frivolous, for Annius hath that skill already; or if he had not, skill were not wanting to cheat such persons. BENTL.

Ver. 361. hunt th' Athenian fowl,] The Owl stamp'd on the reverse on the ancient money of Athens.

Which Chalcis Gods, and Mortals call an Owl,

Ver. 363. Attys and Cecrops.] The first King of Athens, of whom it is hard to suppose any Coins are extant; but not so improbable as what follows, that there should be any of Mahomet, who forbid all Images; and the story of whose Pigeon was a monkish fable. Nevertheless one of these Annius's made a counterfeit medal of that Impostor, now in the collection of a learned Nobleman.

 Blest in one Niger, till he knows of two. 370

Mummius o'erheard him; Mummius, Fool-renown'd
 Who like his Cheops stinks above the ground,
 Fierce as a startled Adder, swell'd and said,
 Rattling an ancient Sistrum at his head:

Speak'st thou of Syrian Princes? Traitor base!
 Mine, Goddess! mine is all the horned race; 376

REMARKS.

Ver. 371. Mummius] This name is not merely an allusion to the Mummies he was so fond of, but probably referred to the Roman General of that name, who burn'd Corinth, and committed the curious Statues to the Captain of a Ship, assuring him, "that if any were lost or broken, he should procure others to be made in their stead:" by which it should seem (whatever may be pretended) that Mummius was no Virtuoso.

Ver. 371.—Fool-renown'd] A compound epithet in the Greek manner, renown'd by fools, or renown'd for making Fools.

Ver. 372. Cheops] A King of Egypt, whose body was certainly to be known, as being buried alone in his Pyramid, and is therefore more genuine than any of the Cleopatra's. This Royal Mummy, being stolen by a wild Arab, was purchased by the Consul of Alexandria, and transmitted to the Museum of Mummius; for proof of which, he brings a passage in Sandys's Travels, where that accurate and learned Voyager assures us that he saw the Sepulchre empty, which agrees exactly (saith he) with the time of the theft above mentioned. But he omits to observe that Herodotus tells the same thing of it in his time.

Ver. 375. Speak'st thou of Syrian Princes? &c.] The strange story following, which may be taken for a fiction of the Poet, is justified by a true relation in Spon's Voyages. Vaillant (who wrote the History of the Syrian Kings, as it is to be found on medals) coming from the Levant, where he had been collecting various Coins, and being pursued by a Corsaire of Sallee, swallowed down twenty gold medals. A sudden Bourasque freed

True, he had wit, to make their value rise;
 From foolish Greeks to steal them, was as wise;
 More glorious yet, from barb'rous hands to keep,
 When Sallee Rovers chac'd him on the deep. 380
 Then taught by Hermes, and divinely bold,
 Down his own throat he risk'd the Græcian gold,
 Receiv'd each Demi-God, with pious care,

 I bought them shrouded in that living shrine, 385
 And, at their second birth, they issue mine.

In this uncertainty, he took neither, but pursued his way to Lyons, where he found his ancient friend, the famous Physician and Antiquary Dufour, to whom he related his adventure. Dufour first asked him whether the Medals were of the higher Empire? He assured him they were. Dufour was ravished with the hope of possessing such a treasure; he bargained with him on the spot for the most curious of them, and was to recover them at his own expence.

 Then thron'd in glass, and nam'd it CAROLINE :

REMARKS.

Ver. 409. and nam'd it Caroline :] It is a compliment which the Florists usually pay to Princes and great persons, to give their names to the most curious Flowers of their raising: Some have been very jealous of vindicating this honour, but none more than that ambitious Gardiner, at Hammersmith, who caused his Favourite to be painted on his Sign, with this inscription, This is My Queen Caroline.

But here a Mother, when she recommends
 To your fraternal care, our sleeping friends. 440
 The common soul of Heav'n's more frugal make,
 Serves but to keep fools pert, and knaves awake :
 A drowzy Watchman, that just gives a knock
 And breaks our rest, to tell us what's a clock.
 Yet by some object ev'ry brain is stirr'd ; 445
 The dull may waken to a Humming bird ;
 The most recluse, discreetly open'd, find Congenial matter in the Cockle-kind ;
 The mind, in Metaphysics at a loss,
 May wander in a wilderness of Moss ; 450

Ver. 441. The common soul, &c.] in the first Edit. thus,
 Of Souls the greater part, Heav'n's common make Serve but to keep fools pert, and knaves awake ;
 And most but find that centinel of God,
 A drowzy Watchman in the land of Nod.

Ver. 453. O! would the sons of men, &c.] This is the third speech of the Goddess to her Supplicants, and completes the whole of what she had to give in instruction on this important occasion, concerning Learning, Civil Society, and Religion. In the first speech, ver. 119. to her Editors and conceited Critics, she directs how to deprave Wit and discredit fine Writers. In her second, ver. 175, to the Educators of Youth, she shews them how all Civil Duties may be extinguished in that one doctrine of divine Hereditary Right. And in this third, she charges the Investigators of Nature to amuse themselves in Trifles, and rest in second causes, with a total disregard of the first. This being all that Dulness can wish, is all she needs to say; and we may apply to her (as the Poet hath managed it) what hath been said of true Wit, that She neither says too little, nor too much.

Ver. 459. a gloomy Clerk,] The Epithet gloomy in this line may seem the same with that of dark in the next. But gloomy relates to the uncomfortable and disastrous condition of an irreligious Sceptic, whereas dark alludes only to his puzzled and embroiled Systems.

Ver. 462. When Moral Evidence shall quite decay,] Alluding to a ridiculous and absurd way of some Mathematicians, in calculating the gradual decay of Moral Evidence by mathematical proportions: according to which calculation, in about fifty years it will be no longer probable that Julius Cæsar was in Gaul, or died in the Senate House.  We nobly take the high Priori Road,
 And reason downward till we doubt of God: —

REMARKS.

Principia Mathematica. But as it seems evident, that facts of a thousand years old, for instance, are now as probable as they were five hundred years ago; it is plain that if in fifty more they quite disappear, it must be owing, not to their Arguments, but to the extraordinary Power of our Goddess; for whose help therefore they have reason to pray.

Ver. 471. the high Priori Road,] Those who, from the effects in this Visible world, deduce the Eternal Power and Godhead of the First Cause, tho' they cannot attain to an adequate idea of the Deity, yet discover so much of him, as enables them to see the End of their Creation, and the Means of their Happiness: whereas they who take this high Priori Road (such as Hobbs, Spinoza, Des Cartes, and some better Reasoners) for one that goes right, ten lose themselves in Mists, or ramble after Visions, which deprive them of all sight of their End, and mislead them in the choice of wrong means.

Ver. 473. Make Nature still] This relates to such as, being ashamed to assert a mere Mechanic Cause, and yet unwilling to forsake it entirely, have had recourse to a certain Plastic Nature, Elastic Fluid, Subtile Matter, &c.

Thrust some Mechanic Cause into his place; 475

Ver. 475.

*Thrust some Mechanic Cause into his place,
 Or bind in Matter, or diffuse in Space]*

The first of these Follies is that of Des Cartes; the second of Hobbs; the third of some succeeding Philosophers.

Ver. 478, &c.

*Make God Man's Image, Man the final Cause, Find Virtue local, all Relation scorn,
 See all in Self—]*

Here the Poet from the errors relating to a Deity in Natural Philosophy, descends to those in Moral. Man was made according to God's Image; this false Theology, measuring his Attributes by ours, makes God after Man's Image. This proceeds from the imperfection of his Reason; the next, of imagining himself the Final Cause, is the effect of his Pride: as the making Virtue and Vice arbitrary, and Morality the imposition of the Magistrate, is of the Corruption of his heart. Hence he centers every thing in himself. The Progress of Dulness herein differing from that of Madness, one ends in seeing all in God, the other in seeing all in self.

Ver. 481. Of nought so certain as our Reason still,] Of which we have most cause to be diffident. Of nought so doubtful as of Soul and Will: Two things the most self-evident, the Existence of our Soul, and the Freedom of our Will.

Ver. 484. Such as Lucretius drew,] Lib. i. ver. 57.

Ver. 487. Or that bright Image] Bright Image was the Title given by the later Platonists to that Vision of Nature, which they had form'd out of their own fancy, so bright, that they called it Αὐτοπλον Ἄσασμα, or the Self seen Image, i. e. seen by its own light.

This Ignis fatuus has in these our times appeared again in the North; and the writings of Hutcheson, Geddes, and their followers, are full of its wonders. For in this lux borealis, this Self seen Image, these second-sighted philosophers see every thing else. SCRIBL.

Ver. 488. Which Theocles in raptur'd Vision saw,] Thus this Philosopher calls upon his Friend, to partake with him in these Visions:

“ To-morrow, when the Eastern Sun
 “ With his first Beams adorns the front
 “ Of yonder Hill, if you're content
 “ To wander with me in the Woods you see,
 “ We will pursue those Loves of ours,
 “ By favour of the Sylvan Nymphs:
 “ and invoking first the Genius of the Place, we'll try to obtain
 “ at least some faint and distant view of the Sovereign Genius
 “ and first Beauty.” Charact. Vol. ii. pag. 245.

This Genius is thus apostrophized (pag. 345.) by the same Philosopher:

“ — O glorious Nature!
 “ Supremely fair, and sovereignly good!
 “ All loving, and all lovely! all divine!
 “ Wise Substitute of Providence! impower'd “ Creatress! or impow'ring Deity, “ Supreme Creator!
 “ Thee I invoke, and thee alone adore.

REMARKS.

Sir Isaac Newton distinguishes between these two in a very different manner. [Princ. Schol. gen. sub fin.] — Hunc cognoscimus solummodo per proprietates suas et attributa, et per sapientissimas et optimas rerum structuras, et causas finales; veneramur autem et colimus ob dominium. Deus etenim sine dominio, providentia, et causis finalibus, nihil aliud est quam Fatum et Natura.

Ver. 489, 90. roves, — Or wanders wild in Academic Groves;] “Above all things I loved Ease, and of all Philosophers those who reasoned most at their Ease, and were never angry or disturbed, as those called Sceptics never were. I looked upon this kind of Philosophy as the prettiest, agreeablest, roving Exercise of the mind, possible to be imagined.” Vol. ii. p. 206.

Ver. 491. That Nature our Society adores,] See the Pantheisticon, with its liturgy and rubrics, composed by Toland, which very lately, for the Edification of the Society, has been translated into English, and sold by the Booksellers of London and Westminster.

Ver. 492. Where Tindal dictates and Silenus snores.] It cannot be denied but that this fine stroke of satire against Atheism was well intended. But how must the Reader smile at our Author's officious zeal, when he is told, that at the time this was written, you might as soon have found a Wolf in England as an Atheist? The truth is, the whole species was exterminated. There is a trifling difference indeed concerning the author of the Atchievement. Some, as Dr Ashenhurst, gave it to Bentley's Boylean Lectures. And he so well convinced that great Man of his merit, that, wherever afterwards he found Atheist, he always read it A Theist. But, in spite of a claim so well made out, others gave the honour of this exploit to a later Boylean Lecturer. A judicious Apologist for Dr Clarke, against Mr Whiston, says, with no less elegance, than positiveness of Expression, It is a most certain truth, that the Demonstration of the being and attributes of God, has extirpated and banished Atheism out of the Christian world, p. 18. It is much to be lamented, that the clearest truths have still their dark side. Here we see it becomes a doubt which of the

Hence being enriched with so many various Gifts and Graces, Initiation into the Mysteries was anciently, as well as in these our times, esteemed a necessary qualification for every high office and employment, whether in Church or State. Lastly, the great Mother, the Bona Dea, shutteth up the Solemnity with her gracious benediction, which concludeth in drawing the curtain, and laying all her Children to rest. It is to be observed, that DULNESS, before this her Restoration, had her Pontiffs in Partibus; who from time to time held her Mysteries in secret, and with great privacy. But now, on her Re-establishment, she celebrateth them, like those of the Cretans (the most ancient of all Mysteries) in open day, and offereth them to the inspection of all men.

Ver. 523. 524. Lost is his God, his Country—And nothing left but homage to a King] So strange as this must seem to a mere English reader, the famous Monf. de la Bruyere declares it to be the character of every good Subject in a Monarchy: "Where

The vulgar herd turn off to roll with Hogs, 525
 To run with Horses, or to hunt with Dogs:
 But, sad example ! never to escape,
 Their Infamy, still keep the human shape.

 And strait succeeded, leaving Shame no room,

Kind Self-conceit to some her Glass applies,
 Which no one looks in with another's eyes.
 But as the Flatt'rer or Dependant paint, 535
 Behold, himself a Patriot, Chief, or Saint.

REMARKS.

(says he) there is no such thing as Love of our Country, the Interest, the Glory, and Service of the Prince, supply its place." De la Republique, chap. x.

Of this duty another celebrated French Author speaks, indeed a little more disrespectfully ; which, for that reason, we shall not translate, but give in his own words, " L'Amour de la Patrie, le grand motif des premiers Heros, n'est plus regardé que comme une Chimère ; l'idée du Service du Roi, étendue jusqu' à l'oubli de tout autre Principe, tient lieu de ce qu'on appelloit autrefois Grandeur d'Ame & Fidelité." Boulainvilliers Hist. des Anciens Parlements de France, &c.

Ver. 529. But she, good Goddess, &c.] The only comfort people can receive, must be owing in some shape or other to Dulness ; which makes some stupid, others impudent, gives Self-conceit to some, upon the Flatteries of their dependants, presents the false colours of Interest to others, and busies or amuses the rest with idle Pleasures or Sensuality, till they become easy under any infamy. Each of which species is here shadowed under Allegorical persons.

REMARKS.

Ver. 544. The balm of Dulness] The true Balm of Dulness, called by the Greek Physicians Κολακεία, is a Sovereign remedy against Inanity, and has its poetic name from the Goddess herself. Its ancient Dispensators were her Poets; and for that reason our Author, Book ii. ver. 207. calls it, the Poet's healing balm: but it is now got into as many hands as Goddard's Drops or Daffy's Elixir. It is prepared by the Clergy, as appears from several places of this poem: And by ver. 534, 535, it seems as if the Nobility had it made up in their own houses. This, which Opera is here said to administer, is but a spurious sort. See my Dissertation on the Silphium of the Antients. BENTL.

he) according to Horace, were the monstrous Fables of the Cyclops, Læstrygons, Scylla, &c. What relation have these to the transformation of Hares into Larks, or of Pigeons into Toads? I shall tell thee. The Læstrygons spitted Men upon Spears, as we do Larks upon Skewers: and the fair Pigeon turned to a Toad is similar to the fair Virgin Scylla ending in a filthy beast. But here is the difficulty, why Pigeons in so shocking a shape should be brought to a Table. Hares indeed might be cut into Larks at a second dressing, out of frugality: Yet that seems no probable motive, when we consider the extravagance before mentioned, of dissolving whole Oxen and Boars into a small vial of Jelly; nay it is expressly said, that all Flesh is nothing in his sight. I have searched in Apicius, Pliny, and the Feast of Trimalchio, in vain: I can only resolve it into some mysterious superstitious Rite, as it is said to be done by a Priest, and soon after called a Sacrifice, attended (as all ancient sacrifices were) with Libation and Song.

This good Scholiast, not being acquainted with modern Luxury, was ignorant that these were only the miracles of French Cookery, and that particularly Pigeons en crapeau were a common dish.

Ill would that Scholiast discharge his duty, who should neglect to honour those whom DULNESS has distinguished: or suffer them to lie forgotten, when their rare modesty would have left them nameless. Let us not, therefore, overlook the Services which have been done her Cause, by one Mr Thomas EDWARDS, a Gentleman, as he is pleased to call himself, of Lincoln's Inn; but, in reality, a Gentleman only of the Dunciad; or, to speak him better, in the plain language of our honest Ancestors to such Mushrooms, A Gentleman of the last Edition: who nobly eluding the solicitude of his careful Father, very early retained himself in the cause of Dulness against Shakespear, and with the wit and learning of his Ancestor Tom Thimble in the Rehearsal, and with the air of good nature and politeness of Caliban in the Tempest, hath now happily finished the Dunce's progress, in personal abuse. For a Libeller is nothing but a Grubstreet Critic run to Seed.

Lamentable is the Dulness of the Gentlemen of the Dunciad. This Fungoso and his friends, who are all Gentlemen, have exclaimed much against us for reflecting on his birth in the words, a Gentleman of the last Edition, which we hereby declare concern not his birth but his adoption only: And mean no more than that he is become a Gentleman of the last Edition of the Dunciad. Since Gentlemen, then, are so captious, we think it proper to declare, that Mr Thomas Thimble, who is here said to be Mr Thomas Edwards's Ancestor, is only related to him by the Muse's side.

Impale a Glow-worm, or Vertù profess,

SCRIBL.

This Tribe of Men, which Scriblerus has here so well exemplified, our Poet hath elsewhere admirably characterized in that happy line,

A brain of Feathers, and a heart of Lead.

For the satire extends much farther than to the person who occasioned it, and takes in the whole species of those on whom a good Education (to fit them for some useful and learned profession) has been bestowed in vain. That worthless Band

Of ever listless Loit'ers, that attend

No cause, no trust, no duty, and no Friend.

Who, with an understanding too dissipated and futile for the offices of civil life, and a heart too lumpish, narrow, and contracted for those of social, become fit for nothing : And so turn Wits and Critics, where sense and civility are neither required nor expected.

Ver. 571. Some, deep Free-Masons, join the silent race] The Poet all along expresses a very particular concern for this silent Race : He has here provided, that in case they will not waken or open (as was before proposed) to a Humming Bird or a Cockle, yet at worst they may be made Free-Masons, where Taciturnity is the only essential Qualification, as it was the chief of the disciples of Pythagoras.

Ver. 576. A Gregorian, one a Gormogon.] A sort of Lay-brothers, Slips from the Root of the Free-Masons.

The last, not least in honour or applause,
 Isis and Cam made Doctors of her Laws.

Then blessing all, Go Children of my care!
 To Practice now from Theory repair,
 All my commands are easy, short, and full:
 My Sons! be proud, be selfish, and be dull.
 Guard my Prerogative, assert my Throne:
 This Nod confirms each Privilege your own.

580

REMARKS.

Ver. 581.

All my commands are easy, short, and full:

My Sons! be proud, be selfish and be dull.]

We should be unjust to the reign of Dulness not to confess that her's has one advantage in it rarely to be met with in Modern Governments, which is, that the public Education of her Youth fits and prepares them for the observance of her Laws, and the exertion of those Virtues she recommends. For what makes men prouder than the empty knowledge of Words; what more selfish than the Free-thinker's System of Morals; or duller than the profession of true Virtuosoship? Nor are her Institutions less admirable in themselves, than in the fitness of these their several relations, to promote the harmony of the whole. For she tells her Sons, and with great truth, that "all her commands are easy, short, and full." For is any thing in nature more easy than the exertion of Pride; more short and simple than the principle of Selfishness; or more full and ample than the sphere of Dulness? Thus, Birth, Education, and wise Policy, all concurring to support the throne of our Goddess, great must be the strength thereof.

SCRIBL.

Ver. 584. each Privilege your own, &c.] This speech of Dulness to her Sons at parting may possibly fall short of the Reader's expectation; who may imagine the Goddess might give them a Charge of more consequence, and, from such a Theory as is before delivered, incite them to the practice of something more extraordinary, than to personate Running Footmen, Jockeys, Stage Coachmen, &c.

But if it be well considered, that whatever inclination they might have to do mischief, her sons are generally rendered harmless by their Inability; and that it is the common effect of Dul-

ness (even in her greatest efforts) to defeat her own design; the Poet, I am persuaded, will be justified, and it will be allowed that these worthy persons, in their several ranks, do as much as can be expected from them.

Ver. 585. The Cap and Switch; &c.] The Goddess's political balance of favour, in the distribution of her rewards, deserves our notice. It consists in joining with those Honours claimed by birth and high place, others more adapted to the genius and talents of the Candidates. And thus her great Fore-runner, John of Leiden, King of Munster, entered on his Government, by making his ancient friend and companion, Knipperdolling, General of his Horse and Hangman. And had but fortune seconded his great schemes of Reformation, it is said, he would have established his whole Household on the same reasonable footing. SCRIBL.

Ver. 590. Arachne's subtile line;] This is one of the most ingenious employments assigned, and therefore recommended only to Peers of Learning. Of weaving Stockings of the Webs of Spiders, see the Phil Trans.

Ver. 591. The Judge to dance his brother Sergeant call;] Alluding perhaps to that ancient and solemn Dance, intitled A call of Sergeants.

Others import yet nobler arts from France,
 Teach Kings to fiddle, and make Senates dance.
 Perhaps more high some daring son may soar,
 Proud to my list to add one Monarch more : 600
 And nobly conscious, Princes are but things
 Born for first Ministers, as Slaves for Kings, Tyrant supreme ! shall three Estates command,
 And make one mighty Dunciad of the Land.

More she had spoke, but yawn'd : All Nature nods :
 What Mortal can resist the Yawn of Gods ? 606
 Churches and Chaples instantly it reach'd,
 St James's first, for leaden Gilbert preach'd :

REMARKS.

Ver. 598. Teach Kings to fiddle] An ancient amusement of Sovereign Princes. (viz.) Achilles, Alexander, Nero ; though despised by Themistocles, who was a Republican.—Make Senates dance, either after their Prince, or to Pontoise, or Siberia.

Ver. 606. What Mortal can resist the Yawn of Gods !] This verse is truly Homerial ; as is the conclusion of the Action, where the great Mother composes all, in the same manner as Minerva at the period of the Odyssey.—It may indeed seem a very singular Epitasis of a Poem, to end as this does, with a Great Yawn ; but we must consider it as the Yawn of a God, and of powerful effects. It is not out of Nature, most long and grave counsels concluding in this very manner : Nor without Authority, the incomparable Spencer having ended one of the most considerable of his works with a Roar ; but then it is the Roar of a Lion, the effects whereof are described as the Catastrophe of the Poem.

Ver. 607. Churches and Chapels, &c.] The Progress of this Yawn is judicious, natural, and worthy to be noted. First it seizeth the Churches and Chapels ; then catcheth the Schools, where, tho' the boys be unwilling to sleep, the Masters are not : Next Westminster-hall, much more hard indeed to subdue, and not totally put to silence even by the Goddesses : Then the Convocation, which tho' extremely desirous to speak, yet cannot :

Then catch'd the Schools; the Hall scarce kept awake;
 The Convocation gap'd, but could not speak : 610
 Lost was the Nation's Sense, nor could be found,
 While the long solemn Unison went round :
 Wide, and more wide, it spread o'er all the realm ;
 Ev'n Palinurus nodded at the Helm :
 The Vapour mild o'er each Committee crept ; 615
 Unfinish'd Treaties in each Office slept ;
 And Chief-less Armies doz'd out the Campaign ;
 And Navies yawn'd for Orders on the Main.

R E M A R K S.

Even the House of Commons, justly called the Sense of the Nation, is lost (that is to say suspended) during the Yawn (far be it from our Author to suggest it could be lost any longer!) but it spreadeth at large over all the rest of the Kingdom, to such a degree, that Palinurus himself (tho' as incapable of sleeping as Jupiter) yet noddeth for a moment: the effect of which, tho' ever so momentary, could not but cause some Relaxation, for the time, in all public affairs. SCRIBL.

Ver. 610. The Convocation gap'd, but could not speak :] Implying a great desire so to do, as the learned Scholiast on the place rightly observes. Therefore, beware Reader, lest thou take this Gap for a Yawn, which is attended with no desire but to go to rest: by no means the disposition of the Convocation; whose melancholy case in short is this: She was, as is reported, infected with the general influence of the Goddess; and while she was yawning carelessly at her ease, a wanton Courtier took her at advantage, and in the very nick clap'd a Gag into her chops. Well therefore may we know her meaning by her gaping; and this distressful posture our poet here describes, just as she stands at this day, a sad example of the effects of Dulness and Malice unchecked and despised. BENTL.

Ver. 615. 618.] These Verses were written many years ago, and may be found in the State Poems of that time. So that Scriblerus is mistaken, or whoever else have imagined this Poem of a fresher date.

O Muse! relate (for you can tell alone,
 Wits have short Memories, and Dunces none) 620
 Relate, who first, who last resign'd to rest;
 Whose Heads she partly, whose completely blest;
 What Charms could Faction, what Ambition lull,
 The Venal quiet, and intrance the Dull;

REMARKS.

Ver. 620. Wits have short Memories,] This seems to be the reason why the Poets, whenever they give us a Catalogue, constantly call for help on the Muses, who, as the Daughters of Memory, are obliged not to forget any thing. So Homer, Iliad ii.

Πληθύν δ' ἔκ' ἄν' ἐγὼ μυθήσομαι ὡς ὀνομήνω,
 Εἰ μὴ Ὀλυμπιάδες, Μῦσαι, Διὸς αἰγιόχοιο
 Θυγαῖρες, μνησαίαθ'—

And Virgil. Æn. vii.

*Et meministis enim, Divæ, & memorare potestis:
 Ad nos vix tenuis famæ perlabitur aura.*

But our Poet had another reason for putting this Task upon the Muse, that, all besides being asleep, she only could relate what passed.

Ver. 624. The Venal quiet, and, &c.] It were a Problem worthy the solution of that profound Scholiast, Mr Upton himself (and perhaps not of less importance than some of those weighty questions so long disputed amongst Homer's Scholiasts) to inform us, which required the greatest effort of our Goddess's power, to intrance the Dull, or to quiet the Venal. For though the Venal may be more unruly than the Dull, yet, on the other hand, it demands a much greater expence of her Virtue to intrance than barely to quiet. SCRIBL.

"twelve lines;" such being the initial and final words, and such the true and entire contents, of this poem.

Thou art to know, Reader! that the first Edition thereof, like that of Milton, was never seen by the Author, (though living and not blind :) The Editor himself confessed as much in his Preface: And no two poems were ever published in so arbitrary a manner. The Editor of this, had as boldly suppressed whole Passages, yea the entire last book, as the Editor of Paradise lost, added and augmented. Milton himself gave but ten books, his Editor twelve; this Author gave four books, his Editor only three. But we have happily done justice to both; and presume we shall live, in this our last labour, as long as in any of our others.

The PUBLISHER* to the READER.

IT will be found a true observation, tho' somewhat surprizing, that when any scandal is vented against a man of the highest distinction and character, either in the state or in literature, the public in general afford it a most quiet reception; and the larger part accept it as favourably as if it were some kindness done to

* The Publisher] Who he was is uncertain; but Edward Ward tells us, in his preface to Durgen, "that most judges are
"of opinion this preface is not of English extraction, but "Hibernian," &c. He means it was written by Dr. Swift, who, whether publisher or not, may be said in a sort to be author of the poem. For when he, together with Mr. Pope (for reasons specified in the preface to their Miscellanies) determined to own the most trifling pieces in which they had any hand, and to destroy all that remained in their power; the first sketch of this poem was snatched from the fire by Dr. Swift, who persuaded his friend to proceed in it, and to him it was therefore inscribed. But the occasion of printing it was as follows:

themselves: whereas if a known scoundrel or block-head but chance to be touched upon, a whole legion is up in arms, and it becomes the common cause of all scriblers, booksellers, and printers whatsoever.

Not to search too deeply into the reason hereof, I will only observe as a fact, that every week for these two months past, the town has been persecuted with † pamphlets, advertisements, letters, and weekly

There was published in those Miscellanies, a Treatise of the Bathos, or Art of Sinking in Poetry, in which was a chapter, where the species of bad writers were ranged in classes, and initial letters of names prefixed, for the most part at random. But such was the Number of Poets eminent in that art, that some one or other took every letter to himself. All fell into so violent a fury, that for half a year, or more, the common News-papers (in most of which they had some property, as being hired writers) were filled with the most abusive falsehoods and scurrilities they could possibly devise; a liberty no ways to be wondered at in those people, and in those papers, that, for many years, during the uncontrolled Licence of the press, had aspersed almost all the great characters of the age; and this with impunity, their own persons and names being utterly secret and obscure. This gave Mr. Pope the thought, that he had now some opportunity of doing good, by detecting and dragging into light these common Enemies of mankind; since, to invalidate this universal slander, it sufficed to shew what contemptible men were the authors of it. He was not without hopes, that, by manifesting the dulness of those who had only malice to recommend them; either the booksellers would not find their account in employing them, or the men themselves, when discovered, want courage to proceed in so unlawful an occupation. This it was that gave birth to the Dunciad; and he thought it an happiness, that, by the late flood of slander on himself, he had acquired such a peculiar right over their Names as was necessary to his design.

essays, not only against the wit and writings, but against the character and person of Mr Pope. And that of all those men who have received pleasure from his works, which by modest computation may be about a ‡ hundred thousand in these kingdoms of England and Ireland; (not to mention Jersey, Guernsey, the Orcades, those in the new world, and foreigners who have translated him into their languages); of all this number not a man hath stood up to say one word in his defence.

The only exception is, the || author of the following poem, who doubtless had either a better insight into the grounds of this clamour, or a better opinion of Mr Pope's integrity, join'd with a greater personal love for him, than any other of his numerous friends and admirers.

Farther, that he was in his peculiar intimacy, appears from the knowledge he manifests of the most ‡ about a hundred thousand] It is surprising with what stupidity this preface, which is almost a continued irony, was taken by those authors. All such passages as these were understood by Curl, Cook, Cibber, and others, to be serious. Hear the Laureate (Letter to Mr Pope, p. 9.) "Tho' I grant the Dunciad a " better poem of its kind than ever was writ; yet, when I read

" it with those vain glorious incumbrances of Notes and Re" marks upon it, &c.—it is amazing, that you, who have writ
" with such masterly spirit upon the ruling Passion, should be so
" blind a slave to your own, as not to see how far a low avarice
" of Praise," &c. (taking it for granted that the notes of Scriblerus and others, were the author's own.)

private authors of all the anonymous pieces against him, and from his having in this poem attacked * no man living, who had not before printed, or published some scandal against this gentleman.

How I came possess'd of it, is no concern to the reader ; but it would have been a wrong to him had I detain'd the publication ; since those names which are its chief ornaments die off daily so fast, as must render it too soon unintelligible. If it provoke the author to give us a more perfect edition, I have my end.

Who he is I cannot say, and (which is a great pity) there is certainly † nothing in his style and manner of writing, which can distinguish or discover him : For, if it bears any resemblance to that of Mr. Pope, it is not improbable but it might be done on purpose, with a view to have it pass for his. But by the frequency of his allusions to Virgil, and a labour'd (not to say affected) shortness in imitation of him, I should think him more an admirer of the Roman poet than of the Grecian, and in that not of the same taste with his friend.

* The publisher in these words went a little too far : But it is certain, whatever names the reader finds that are unknown to him, are of such ; and the exception is only of two or three, whose dulness, impudent scurrility, or self-conceit, all mankind agreed to have justly intitled them to a place in the Dunciad.

† there is certainly nothing in his style, &c.] This irony had small effect in concealing the author. The Dunciad, imperfect as it was, had not been published two days, but the whole Town gave it to Mr. Pope.

I have been well informed, that this work was the labour of full six * years of his life, and that he wholly retired himself from all the avocations and pleasures of the world, to attend diligently to its correction and perfection ; and six years more he intended to bestow upon it, as it should seem by this verse of Statius, which was cited at the head of his manuscript,

O mihi bisseños multum vigilata per annos, Duncia†!

Hence also we learn the true title of the poem ; which, with the same certainty as we call that of Homer the Iliad, of Virgil the Æneid, of Camoens the Lusiad, we may pronounce, could have been, and can be no other than

The D U N C I A D.

* the labour of full six years, &c.] This also was honestly and seriously believed by divers gentlemen of the Dunciad. J. Ralph, pref. to Sawney. “ We are told it was the labour “ of six years, with the utmost assiduity and application : It is “ no great compliment to the author’s sense, to have employed
“ so large a part of his life,” &c. So also Ward, pref. to Dürgen, “ The Dunciad, as the publisher very wisely confesses, “ cost the author six years retirement from all the pleasures of “ life ; though it is somewhat difficult to conceive, from either “ its bulk or beauty, that it could be so long in hatching,
“ &c. But the length of time, and closeness of application,
“ were mentioned to prepossess the reader with a good opinion
“ of it”

They just as well understood what Scriblerus said of the Poem.

† The prefacer to Curl’s Key, p. 3. took this word to be really in Statius : “ By a quibble on the word Duncia, the “ Dunciad is formed.” Mr Ward also follows him in the same opinion.

It is styled Heroic, as being doubly so ; not only with respect to its nature, which, according to the best rules of the ancients, and strictest ideas of the moderns, is critically such ; but also with regard to the heroidal disposition and high courage of the writer, who dar'd to stir up such a formidable, irritable, and implacable race of mortals.

There may raise some obscurity in chronology from the Names in the poem, by the inevitable removal of some authors, and insertion of others, in their niches. For whoever will consider the unity of the whole design, will be sensible, that the poem was not made for these authors, but these authors for the poem. I should judge that they were clapp'd in as they rose, fresh and fresh, and chang'd from day to day ; in like manner as when the old boughs wither, we thrust new ones into a chimney.

I would not have the reader too much troubled or anxious, if he cannot decypher them ; since, when he shall have found them out, he will probably know no more of the persons than before.

Yet we judg'd it better to preserve them as they are, than to change them for fictitious names ; by which the satire would only be multiplied, and applied to many instead of one. Had the hero, for instance, been called Codrus, how many would have affirmed him to have been Mr T. Mr E. Sir R. B. &c. but now all that unjust scandal is saved by calling him a name, which by good luck happens to be that of a real person.

All these were afterwards reprinted in a pamphlet, intituled, A Collection of all the Verses, Essays, Letters, and Advertisements occasioned by Mr Pope and Swift's and Miscellanies, prefaced by Concanen, Anonymous, octavo, and printed for A. Moore, 1728, price 1 s. Others of an older date, having lain as waste Paper many years, were, upon the publication of the Dunciad, brought out, and their Authors betrayed by the mercenary Booksellers (in hope of some possibility of vending a few) by advertising them in this manner.—“ The Confederates, a farce. By Capt. Breval (for which he was put into the Dunciad.) “ An Epilogue to Powel's Puppet-show. By Col. Duckett (for which he is put into the Dunciad.) “ Essays, &c. By Sir Richard Blackmore. (N. B. It was for a passage of this Book that Sir Richard was put into the Dunciad.) And so of others.

After the Dunciad, 1728.

An Essay on the Dunciad. Octavo, printed for J. Roberts. [In this book, p. 9 it was formally declared, "That the complaint of the aforesaid Libels and Advertisements was forged and untrue: that all mouths had been silent, except in Mr Pope's praise; and nothing against him published, but by Mr Theobald."]

Sawney, in blank verse, occasioned by the Dunciad; with a Critique on that poem. By J. Ralph [a person never mentioned in it at first, but inserted after] printed for J. Roberts, octavo.

The Arts of Logic and Rhetoric, partly taken from Bouhours, with new Reflections, &c. By John Oldmixon, octavo.

Remarks on the Dunciad. By Mr Dennis, dedicated to Theobald, octavo.

A Supplement to the Profund. Anon. by Matthew Concanen, octavo.

Mist's Weekly Journal, June 8. A long letter sign'd W. A. Writ by some or other of the Club of Theobald, Dennis, Moore, Concanen, Cooke, who for some time held constant weekly meetings for these kind of performances.

Daily Journal, June 11. A Letter sign'd Philo-scriblerus, on the name of Pope—Letter to Mr Theobald, in verse, sign'd B. M. [Bezaleel Morris] against Mr P—. Many other little epigrams about this time in the same papers, by James Moore, and others.

Mist's Journal, June 22. A Letter by Lewis Theobald.

Flying Post, August 8. Letter on Pope and Swift.

Daily Journal, August 8. Letter charging the Author of the Dunciad with Treason.

Durgen: a plain satire on a pompous satirist. By Edward Ward, with a little of James Moore.

Apollo's Maggot in his Cups. By E. Ward.

Gulliveriana secunda. Being a Collection of many of the Libels in the News-papers, like the former Volume, under the same title, by Smedley. Advertised in the Craftsman, Nov. 9, 1728, with this remarkable promise, that “any thing which any body should send “ as Mr Pope’s or Dr Swift’s, should be inserted and “ published as theirs.”

Pope Alexander’s supremacy and infallibility examined, &c. By George Duckett, and John Dennis, quarto.

Dean Jonathan’s Paraphrase on the ivth chapter of Genesis. Writ by E. Roome, folio, 1729.

Labeo. A paper of verses by Leonard Welsted, which after came into One Epistle, and was published by James Moore, quarto, 1730. Another part of it came out in Welsted’s own name, under the just title of Dulness and Scandal, folio, 1731.

There have been since published,

Verses on the Imitator of Horace. By a Lady [or between a Lady, a Lord, and a Court-’squire.] Printed for J. Roberts, folio.

An Epistle from a Nobleman to a Doctor of Divinity, from Hampton-court [Lord H——y.] Printed for J. Roberts also, folio.

A Letter from Mr Cibber to Mr Pope. Printed for W. Lewis in Covent-garden, octavo.

A D V E R T I S E M E N T

To the FIRST EDITION with Notes, in Quarto, 1729.

IT will be sufficient to say of this edition, that the reader has here a much more correct and complete copy of the DUNCIAD, than has hitherto appeared. I cannot answer but some mistakes may have slipped into it; but a vast number of others will be prevented by the names being now not only set at length, but justified by the authorities and reasons given. I make no doubt, the author's own motive to use real rather than feigned names, was his care to preserve the innocent from any false application; whereas, in the former editions, which had no more than the initial letters, he was made, by keys printed here, to hurt the inoffensive; and (what was worse) to abuse his friends, by an impression at Dublin.

The commentary which attends this poem was sent me from several hands, and consequently must be unequally written; yet will have one advantage over most commentaries, that it is not made upon conjectures, or at a remote distance of time: And the reader cannot but derive one pleasure from the very Obscurity of the persons it treats of, that it partakes of the nature of a Secret, which most people love to be let into, tho' the men or the things be ever so inconsiderable or trivial.

Of the Persons it was judged proper to give some account : for since it is only in this monument that they must expect to survive (and here survive they will, as long as the English tongue shall remain such as it was in the reigns of Queen ANNE and King GEORGE,) it seemed but humanity to bestow a word or two upon each, just to tell what he was, what he writ, when he lived, and when he died.

If a word or two more are added upon the chief offenders, 'tis only as a paper pinned upon the breast, to mark the enormities for which they suffered ; lest the correction only should be remembered, and the crime forgotten.

In some articles it was thought sufficient, barely to transcribe from Jacob, Curl, and other writers of their own rank, who were much better acquainted with them than any of the authors of this comment can pretend to be. Most of them had drawn each other's characters on certain occasions ; but the few here inserted are all that could be saved from the general destruction of such works.

Of the part of Scriblerus I need say nothing ; his manner is well enough known, and approved by all but those who are too much concerned to be judges.

The imitations of the Ancients are added, to gratify those who either never read, or may have forgotten them ; together with some of the Parodies and allusions to the most excellent of the Moderns. If, from the frequency of the former, any man think the poem too much a Cento, our poet will but appear to have done the same thing in jest which Boileau did in earnest; and upon which Vida, Fracastorius, and many of the most eminent Latin poets, professedly valued themselves.

To the FIRST EDITION of

The FOURTH BOOK of the DUNCIAD, when printed separately in the Year 1742.

WE apprehend it can be deemed no injury to the author of the three first books of the Dunciad, that we publish this Fourth. It was found merely by accident, in taking a survey of the Library of a late eminent nobleman; but in so blotted a condition, and in so many detached pieces, as plainly shewed it to be not only incorrect, but unfinished. That the author of the three first books had a design to extend and complete his poem in this manner, appears from the dissertation prefixed to it, where it said, that the design is more extensive, and that we may expect other episodes to complete it: And from the declaration in the argument to the third book, that the accomplishment of the prophecies therein would be the theme hereafter of a greater Dunciad. But whether or no he be the author of this, we declare ourselves ignorant. If he be, we are no more to be blamed for the publication of it, than Tucca and Varius for that of the last six books of the Æneid, tho' perhaps inferior to the former.

If any person be possessed of a more perfect copy of this work, or of any other fragments of it, and will communicate them to the publisher, we shall make the next edition more complete : In which we also promise to insert any Criticisms that shall be published (if at all to the purpose) with the Names of the Authors ; or any letters sent us (tho' not to the purpose) shall yet be printed under the title of Epistolæ Obscurorum Virorum ; which, together with some others of the same kind formerly laid by for that end, may make no unpleasant addition to the future impressions of this poem.

To the complete EDITION of 1743.

I Have long had a design of giving some sort of Notes on the works of this poet. Before I had the happiness of his acquaintance, I had written a commentary on his Essay on Man, and have since finished another on the Essay on Criticism. There was one already on the Dunciad, which had met with general approbation: but I still thought some additions were wanting (of a more serious kind) to the humorous notes of Scriblerus, and even to those written by Mr Cleland, Dr Arbuthnot, and others. I had lately the pleasure to pass some months with the author in the country, where I prevailed upon him to do what I had long desired, and favour me with his explanation of several passages in his works. It happened, that just at that juncture was published a ridiculous book against him, full of Personal Reflections, which furnished him with a lucky opportunity of improving This Poem, by giving it the only thing it wanted, a more considerable Hero. He was always sensible of its defect in that particular, and owned he had let it pass with the Hero it had, purely for want of a better; not entertaining the least expectation that such an one was reserved for this Post, as has since obtained the Laurel: But since that had happened, he could no longer deny this justice either to him or the Dunciad.

And yet I will venture to say, there was another motive which had still more weight with our Author: This person was one, who, from every Folly (not to say Vice) of which another would be ashamed, has constantly derived a Vanity; and therefore was the man in the world who would least be hurt by it.

WHereas, upon occasion of certain Pieces relating to the Gentlemen of the Dunciad, some have been willing to suggest, as if they looked upon them as an abuse: we can do no less than own, it is our opinion, that to call these Gentlemen bad authors is no sort of abuse, but a great truth. We cannot alter this opinion without some reason; but we promise to do it in respect to every person who thinks it an injury to be represented as no Wit, or Poet, provided he procures a Certificate of his being really such, from any three of his companions in the Dunciad, or from Mr Dennis singly, who is esteemed equal to any three of the number.

Mr DRYDEN,

His POLITICS, RELIGION, MORALS.

MR Dryden is a mere renegado from monarchy, poetry, and good sense ^a. A true republican son of monarchical Church ^b. A republican Atheist ^c. Dryden was from the beginning an ἀλλοπρόσαλλος, and I doubt not will continue so the last ^d.

In the Poem called Abjalom and Achitophel are notoriously traduced, The KING, the QUEEN, the LORDS and GENTLEMEN, not only their honourable persons expos'd, but the whole NATION and its REPRESENTATIVES notoriously libell'd. It is scandalum magnatum, yea of MAJESTY itself ^e.

He looks upon God's Gospel as a foolish fable, like

MR Pope is an open and mortal enemy to his country, and the commonwealth of learning^a. Some call him a popish whig, which is directly inconsistent^b. Pope, as a Papist, must be a tory and high flyer^c. He is both a whig and tory^d.

He hath made it his custom to cackle to more than one party in their own sentiments^e.

In his Miscellanies, the Persons abused are, The KING, the QUEEN, His late MAJESTY, both Houses of PARLIAMENT, the Privy-Council, the Bench of BISHOPS, the Establish'd CHURCH, the present MI-the Pope, to whom he is a pitiful purveyor ^f. His very christianity may be questioned ^g. He ought to expect more severity than other men, as he is most unmerciful in his own reflections on others ^h. With as good a right as his Holiness, he sets up for poetical infallibility ⁱ.

Mr DRYDEN only a Versifier.

His whole Libel is all bad matter, beautified (which is all that can be said of it) with good metre ^k. Mr Dryden's genius did not appear in any thing more than his Versification, and whether he is to be ennobled for that only, is a question ^l.

Mr DRYDEN'S VIRGIL.

Tonson calls it Dryden's Virgil, to shew that this is not that Virgil so admir'd in the Augustean age; but a Virgil of another stamp, a silly impertinent, nonsensical writer. None but a Bavius, a Mævius, or a Bathyllus carp'd at Virgil ^m; and none but such unthinking Vermin admire his Translator ⁿ. It is true, soft and easy lines might become Ovid's Epistles or Art or Love—But Virgil, who is all great and majestic, &c. requires strength of lines, weight of words, and closeness of expressions; not an ambling Muse running on Carpet-ground, and shod as lightly as a Newmarket

He is a Popish Rhymester, bred up with a contempt of the Sacred Writings^g. His Religion allows him to destroy Herteicks, not only with his pen, but with fire and sword; and such were all those unhappy Wits whom he sacrificed to his accursed Popish Principles^h. It deserved Vengeance to suggest, that Mr Pope had less Infallibity than his Namesake at Romeⁱ.

Mr P O P E only a Versifier.

The smooth numbers of the Dunciad are all that recommend it, nor has it any other merit^k. It must be owned that he hath got a notable knack of rhyming and writing smooth verse^l.

Mr P O P E's H O M E R.

The Homer which Lintot prints, does not talk like Homer, but like Pope; and he who translated him, one would swear, had a Hill in Tipperary for his Parnassus, and a puddle in some Bog for his Hippocrene^m. He has no Admirers among those that can distinguish, discern, and judgeⁿ.

racer.—He has numberless faults in his Author's meaning, and in propriety of expression ^o.

Mr DRYDEN understood no Greek nor Latin.

Mr Dryden was once, I have heard, at Westminster school: Dr Busby would have whipt him for so childish a Paraphrase ^p. The meanest Pedant in England would whip a Lubber of twelve for construing so absurdly ^q. The Translator is mad, every line betrays his Stupidity ^r. The faults are innumerable, and convince me that Mr Dryden did not, or would not understand his Author ^s. This shews how fit Mr D. may be to translate Homer! A mistake in a single letter might fall on the Printer well enough, but εἰχωρ for ἰχωρ must be the error of the Author: Nor had he art enough to correct it at the Press ^t. Mr Dryden writes for the Court-Ladies—He writes for the Ladies, and not for use ^u.

The Translator puts in a little Burlesque now and then into Virgil, for a ragout to his cheated Subscribers ^w.

Mr DRYDEN trick'd his Subscribers.

I wonder that any man, who could not but be conscious of his own unfitness for it, should go to amuse the learned world with such an undertaking! A man ought to value his Reputation more than Money; and not to hope that those who can read for themselves, will

He hath a knack at smooth verse, but without either Genius or good sense, or any tolerable knowledge of English. The qualities which distinguish Homer are the beauties of his Diction and the Harmony of his Versification.—But this little Author, who is so much in vogue, has neither sense in his Thoughts, nor English in his Expressions ^o.

Mr P O P E understood no Greek.

He hath undertaken to translate Homer from the Greek, of which he knows not one word, into English, of which he understands as little ^p. I wonder how this Gentleman would look, should it be discover'd, that he has not translated ten verses together in any book of Homer with justice to the Poet, and yet he dares reproach his fellow-writers with not understanding Greek ^q. He has stuck so little to his Original as to have his knowledge in Greek call'd in question ^r. I should be glad to know which it is of all Homer's Excellencies which has so delighted the Ladies, and the Gentlemen who judge like Ladies ^s.

But he has a notable talent at Burlesque; his genius slides so naturally into it, that he hath burlesqued Homer without designing it ^t.
